The King's Illness

Col. Michael Friedsam

Honor to Michigan

Important to Parents

— By Arthur Brisbane —

ENGLAND IS alarmed by the King's illness, its seriousness revealed only yesterday.

Diagnosed as bronchitis, it is probably a return of the serious illness from which the King escaped so narrowly two years ago. On that occasion bronchial pneumonia developed epiema and septicemia, that, according to physicians, weaken the system permanently, and minimize the power to resist any later attack.

News of the death of Col. Michael Friedsam will grieve hundreds of merchants throughout the nation that knew and respected the head of B. Altman & Co. in New York city. Colonel Friedsam was a good citizen, active in the improvement of New York, his native city, valuable in public service during the war.

But his greatest public service was his contributing to the most important of modern problems, which is DISTRIBUTION. Many hundreds of millions' worth of the world's products reached the consumer through him.

Citizens of Michigan honor their State by refusing, in overwhelming majority, to restore the death penalty in their State.

That penalty, abolished in Michigan 84 years ago, is an imitation by the state of the murderer's tactics. The installation of an electric chair in the State prison at Jackson would have been a blot upon the State, a backward step for a great Commonwealth that has not known capital punishment for 100 years.

It is important for parents to know that the dreaded polio-myletis, or infantile paralysis, attacks children mainly through the nose. The germ infects water, and can be taken through the nose passages by children swimming in unclean water. So says Dr. Weyer of the Willard Parker Laboratories.

The germ is probably introduced into the nose most often by the fingers. Children should be taught from infancy to keep their hands away from mouths and noses. Influenza, Scarlet fever infections start after the germ is planted on the mucous membranes.

Chinese proverb formula: Don't touch your nose or mouth, except with your elbow." Children and adults should remember that.

New York considers altering the building code governing construction of elevators. Builders want to increase speed and operate two cars in one shaft. It should be possible to operate several elevators in one shaft, to save space in high buildings.

Forty years ago, in the London financial district, one building had an endless chain elevator. Too slow for the United States.

Quakers have amended their "rule of discipline" for the first time in 38 years. Quaker girls and women may add "frills" and lace to the plain Quaker garb.

It is decided that mutton leg sleeves for girls, suits of plain black with no collars or cuffs for men, are not necessary to good morals here or happiness hereafter.

Many eligible Americans are tired of "frills" cut off above the knee or below the waist in the back.

Mr. Kenneth Collins, who knows about buying and selling, and how to promote both, says: "Buying power is on the upgrade." An important fact, according to Mr. Collins, is that people are liquidating their installment debts. The depression of 1929 found them owing about six billions of dollars. They have paid off half.

Wall Street yesterday continued to look at prosperity through the wrong end of the opera glass. "Big Steel" was not feeling well. Copper was offered at nine and one-half cents a pound. That copper would be a good investment, if you had room to store it.

More murders in Palestine, in connection with Easter time celebrations by Arabs, Jews and Christians, indicate smoldering hatred on the part of Arabs, resenting the importance of Jewish enterprise in Palestine development.

Two Jewish youths and a Jewish girl were shot dead outside of Haifa. Others were wounded.

John J. Raskob wants the Democratic candidates and delegates, to say exactly what they think about prohibition. It turns out that Democratic Presidential candidates don't WANT to say what they think. They want to teach "both round and flat" as the young candidate for school teacher said when asked by a fundamentalist school board what he taught children about the earth's shape.

WIFE IS WITH LONGWORTH; CRISIS NEAR

Speaker of House Is Very Ill With Pneumonia; Oxygen Used as "Precaution"

Aiken, S. C., April 8 (AP)—Nicholas Longworth, for four years Speaker of the House, lay seriously ill here today from pneumonia. Mrs. Longworth was at his bedside.

The former Speaker, Boston physician and Peabody hospital attendant, arrived the morning at 10:30 a. m. She was summoned last night after physicians attending Longworth's uncle, Joseph R. Nicholas, had said 10 days developed into pneumonia Monday night.

TO ISSUE BULLETINS

It was announced on Mrs. Longworth's arrival that the first formal bulletin on the case would be issued at 9 o'clock tonight. Bulletins will be issued tomorrow at 9 a. m., noon and 9 p. m.

Dr. R. H. Wilds of Aiken, in charge of the patient, said Longworth rested comfortably during the morning. Longworth's pulse, he said, was 110, his temperature 101 and his respiration 28. He said the patient's blood pressure was satisfactory. He added that Longworth had lobar pneumonia, but only the right lung was affected.

"A crisis, if there is one," he declared, "will probably come in from three to five days."

HULTMAN TO BAR CHICAGO GANGS HERE

Boston Police Will Be Given Orders to Use Machine Guns on "Invaders".

Warned that Chicago gangsters were headed for Boston, Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman today delivered a "rout" ultimatum and threatened to use machine guns to carry it out.

"Through the grapevine telegraph," the underworld system of communication, word came that the dirty Capone gangsters, by Anton J. Cermak, new mayor of the eastern city, had been headed there.

WILL DRIVE 'EM OUT

"There will be no organized gangland in Boston," Supt. Michael H. Crowley said today, speaking for the commissioner.

"The police are waiting for them and they will be routed even if we have to use machine guns.

"A general order to all members of the department is being prepared for reading at roll call tonight that we have information they are headed here.

"The detective force will be spread out at all railroad stations, steamship terminals, roads leading into the city and other points where they might enter.

"They have been instructed to bring in as suspicious persons all those who cannot give a good account of themselves. All will be brought to headquarters and be thoroughly looked up.

GANGS ARE WARNED

"The people of Boston are used to a decent condition of living and I won't stand for any change."

PULMOTOR WAS USED POLICE CLAIM

Victim Taken to Office of One in Effort to Save Her Life, They Say

By JAMES J. SMITH
Boston American Staff Correspondent

Fall River, April 8—Two Fall River physicians will be questioned in the Verna Russell murder probe today as a result of startling new evidence placing the actual slaying in Massachusetts, it was learned by the Boston Evening American.

To the office of one, according to this evidence, the body of the strangled student nurse was rushed from the Watuppa reservation by her frantic slayer in the vain hope of resuscitation.

There a lungmotor was used in an ineffectual attempt to restore life. Then the body was taken into Rhode Island, where there is no death penalty for murder.

BROKEN BY LUNGMOTOR

The automobile of Elliott R. Hathaway, under arrest in Rhode Island for the crime, was seen parked outside the office of this doctor on the night of the murder, according to a new witness.

In the opinion of State Detectives Joseph Ferrari and John Stokes two teeth broken from Miss Russell's mouth were dislodged by the lungmotor.

These remained in the doctor's office until the next day when the doctor visited the Tiverton lane where the body was found and planted" them, the officials believe.

This theory is consistent with the failure to find them on a first minute search of the lane and their subsequent discovery on the second day following the murder.

NEAR RESERVATION

It is also consistent with the theory that the slayer of the Truesdale Hospital nurse had help in transporting her body from the State, where electrocution is the penalty for murder.

And it is not inconsistent, detectives point out, with the evidence of still another new witness that a telephone call, saying Miss Rus-

$10,800 NAVAL STORES THEFT

Theft of more than $10,000 in naval stores from the coast guard base at Gloucester was charged to a ring of service men and civilians today by City Marshal Daniel F. Casey in that city.

With Capt. R. J. Wheeler, disciplinary officer of the coast guard office at Washington, Marshal Casey said today he has been working on the thefts of stores that brought the arrest of one man last Saturday.

At that time, while news of the discovery of stolen goods found its way to the public, the utmost secrecy was thrown about the details. Raymond Rhodes, chief commissary officer at the base, was the man arrested. He faces a court martial in connection with the thefts.

Marshal Casey revealed today that it was the trail of a suspected rum runner that led to discovery of the stolen goods and subsequent arrest of Rhodes.

He said officers following a truck driver were led to the home of Rhodes in Calder st. He reported his suspicions to authorities at Washington and Capt. Wheeler personally took charge of the service investigation.

Three civilians are threatened with arrest, he said, but the actions are being withheld so the government may call them as witnesses against Rhodes.

"Officers traced shipments made by Rhodes through an express company that showed consignments of goods to Norfolk, Va.; Helena, Mont., and other points," Casey said. "The shipments were made to relatives of Rhodes and were made in his wife's name. The matter began to assume such proportions that it was thought best to notify Washington."

U.S. WOMEN, SPENDING ABROAD, ARE BLAMED FOR DEPRESSION

WET COUNTRIES GET NEW TRADE, MACK SAYS

Democratic Chief Says Thousands Spent by Americans on Canadian Goods

Washington, April 8 (AP)—The theory that American women are contributing to the depression by spending money abroad appeared today in the mass of comment on the Raskob home rule plan.

Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, New York national Democratic committeeman, was in Washington when he read the letter from Chairman Raskob asking platform suggestions from national committeemen.

FAVORS REPEAL PLANK.

Mack said he thought the 1932 platform should include a plan for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, whereas the national committee chairman proposed that the amendment be retained and another adopted to permit states to decide individually whether they would have prohibition.

"To my mind," Mack asserted, "the bottom is out of prohibition."

Basing his statement on observations at the border point of Buffalo, Mack he thought the amount of money Americans were spending in Canada and abroad contributed to "the condition in this country."

"Every day hundreds cross over to Canada," he said.

"If all they did was wine and dine," he explained, "I wouldn't object, but every woman who goes with her husband is under the impression that she can save money in buying Canadian goods. The amount of money spent in Canada by American women is tremendous."

SEES AN END TO BATTLE.

Meanwhile, others continued to express divergent opinions on the Raskob poll. Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, a leader in the recent progressives' conference, believed Raskob was attempting to depress a "sham battle" over prohibition.

In addition to baby Lillian and Miss Malaka others affected were Mrs. Eva Cidlerich, Joseph Cidlevich, George Cidlevich and Ralph Cidlevich. (Staff photo.)

GERMAN ENVOY CHARMED BY BOSTON

Dr. Friedrich W. von Prittwitz und Gaffron Calls on the Governor and Mayor

Boston's "special charm" came in for praise from Dr. Friedrich W. von Prittwitz und Gaffron, German ambassador to the United States, today as he began a three-day visit packed with social engagements.

Arriving at the Back Bay station at 7 a. m., the ambassador, who is 47, one of the youngest men holding a high diplomatic post, went to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel and then made calls on Governor Ely, Mayor Curley and Cardinal O'Connell.

"Boston has a special charm. I like it very much and am glad to be back here again," he told the Governor.

KNOWS BOSTON WELL.

Through a mistake the Governor did not expect him today, the call having been set down for Friday on the official calendar, but after a rather undiplomatic interchange between two secretaries over the telephone, the matter was adjusted.

Gov. Ely was, however, without his aides when the call was made. The two sat chatting together in the inner executive office for about ten minutes, after which the ambassador cardinal at the dioscean house on Lake st. and then went to City Hall.

There the Mayor was not on hand, having attended a funeral, but he arrived within a few minutes of the ambassador. In the meantime Standing Willcox, social secretary, entertained the visitor. Later he signed the guest book and received a key to the city.

Dr. Prittwitz und Gaffron came to Boston unaccompanied except by his secretary, A. von Wutjnau. The latter and the German consul-general in Boston, Kurt von Tippelskirch, made the round of calls with him.

"I know Boston quite well and am glad to be back here," said the ambassador to the governor during their brief chat. Governor Ely reciprocated with complimentary remarks about Berlin, which he visited a few years ago.

BUSY THREE DAYS.

This noon he was guest of Harvard professors in Dunster House, Cambridge, and late this afternoon will be tendered a reception by Consul General von Tippelskirch in the latter's residence, 45 Devon rd., Newton Center.

The United German Societies of Massachusetts will entertain him at the Arbeiter Club, Amory pl., Roxbury, this evening. Present to that Constantine Hutchins will give him a dinner at his home, 4 Alwyn ton pl., Brookline.

"Boston is well known in Germany for trade and industry and for your position as a literary art center," he said in an interview. "Everybody knows your marvelous museum and library.

"Mine is a good-will visit. I hope to visit all the other principal cities sooner or later. Next year I am going to California.

"Of all the nations in the war it was between the United States and Germany that friendly feeling was first re-established, because we have so many things in common both in culture and in business. On the whole, I think Franco-German feeling has been improved."

WORLD DRIVE IS PLANNED BY BOND FIRM

Brookline Man Outlines Campaign Proposed at Hearing Before Master

The entire world was planned as the field for operations of the Founders Securities Trust and the United Investment Assurance Trust, Charles W. Seager of Brookline testified today in federal court before George R. Farnum as master.

Atty. Farnum is conducting the hearing on charges of conspiracy against directors of the two organizations, which had a combined listing of $25,000,000.

In his testimony, Seager, named in the complaints of stockholders as one of the respondents, declared that he traveled around the world for the companies at his own expense.

"It was our idea," he said, "to have a thoroughly balanced organization, and also to set up contacts with people in various sections of the world, through whom we could obtain necessary information dealing with industrial enterprises.

"The organization purposed to develop a new type of bond, which was to have a security, in part, in diversified bonds and stocks internationally placed."

Seager introduced a mass of statistics connected with the organization workings and was frequently interrupted in his testimony by the master to clarify certain figures and tables

GANG RULE ENDS SAYS CERMAK

Chicago, April 8 (AP)—The political career of William Hale Thompson, as mayor, by today meant a record-breaking blanket of votes which elevated to the mayorship Anton J. Cermak, one-time immigrant boy from Bohemia.

"Big Bill the Builder" and a past master in the art of American politics, was swept out of office by his Democratic opponent by the overwhelming majority of 191,416.

The result by which the "cowboy" mayor's aspirations for a fourth term were abruptly ended, was hailed by his opponents as a "new deal for Chicago."

"Chicago," said Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, "has redeemed itself. We've had enough of Nero fiddling while Rome burned. We had told the world that we are prepared to regain our business level and restore our good name."

"Criminals," said Mayor-elect Cermak today, "will find no hiding place here. Our streets will be safe. Industry and commerce will find the highest encouragement. We shall at once set ourselves to the task of preparing our house for those who shall visit us at the 'Century-of-Progress exhibition. This truly begins a new day for Chicago.

WILD CELEBRATION

Redlam broke loose in the streets of downtown Chicago as shouts of frenzied Cermak supporters hailed his victory over the master showman. Bombs and bullets added to the din, but they were fired harmlessly into the heavens.

Official canvass of the vote cast was speeded up by the election commission today in an effort to conclude the work by Friday night and present Cermak with his certificate of election, enabling him to take office immediately.

The mayor-elect went into seclusion to select his cabinet members, but he indicated the list would be completed by Friday.

Cermak will have a majority in the new city council. On the basis of unofficial returns, it appeared that 30 Democrats would sit in the council chamber.

One of the first results of Cermak's election was seen in an order today from Acting Police Commissioner John H. Alcock restoring four police captains to their regular stations. He had replaced them three days ago.

"Big Bill," who entered the campaign after a bitter partisan campaign fight announcing he would never seek office again, smiled—a forced smile—congratulated his victorious opponent and then served notice that the vote that reduced him to the rank of a private citizen would not deter him in efforts to aid Chicago.

PRINCESS IS ROYAL BRIDE

tendance of two editors considered inimical to the church.

The Vatican withdrew its objections to the cardinal's participation, yesterday, when, it is believed, it was pointed out that the excommunicated editors, Leon Daudet and Charles Murras, would be present only as journalists.

BRIDE IS ONLY 18

The wedding took place in the cathedral at Palermo, near the Villa d'Aumala, which is the property of the Duke of Guise, father of Prince Henri and pretender to the French throne, and was the site of Louis Philippe's exile at the time of Napoleon's abdication.

More than 1000 persons were present. The bride is 18 and the prince 23.

Princess Isabelle wore a gown of rich satin embroidered in silver palm leaves, woven specially for her and presented by the ladies of Lyons, France. Her veil was of Brussels lace, held in place by a bandeau of diamonds. Her pearls were two necklaces and pearl earrings. She carried a missal instead of a bridal bouquet.

The Duchess of Guise, mother of the bridegroom, was attired in a gown of gold and white brocade, with diamond and sapphire jewels, while the Princes Pierre d'Orleans and Bragance, the bride's mother, wore a gown of gold lace, with a short coat lined in emerald green crepe.

FORTUNE IN GIFTS

The marriage took place at Palermo, since Prince Jaw forbids presumptive claimants of a house which has ever occupied the throne of France to live here. The couple will make their home after a while at the Orateau Agimont, near Brussels, Belgium, which was the wedding gift of the bridegroom's father.

Other bridal gifts included silver, tapestries and vases valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars. Among them was a silver toilet set presented by the royalist committees of France. Prince Henri's gifts to his bride were two pearl necklaces, two diamond diadems, a pair of pearl earrings, a pair of diamond and pearl earrings and a diamond brooch.

The wedding luncheon was served in three giant portions on the villa grounds.

KING GEORGE GAINS SLIGHTLY

Windsor, Eng., April 8 (AP)—The British public, which had been awaiting, not without certain anxiety, news from the sickroom of their monarch was heartened this forenoon by an official statement that there was slight improvement in condition of King George.

The king had been suffering since last Sunday from a chest cold, which yesterday was designated in an official bulletin as an attack of ab-acute bronchitis.

In view of yesterday's announcement that his progress, wells satisfactory, had been slow, today's statement from his castle residence that there had been an improvement was regarded as a favorable sign.

Authoritative quarters pointed out, however, that it was inevitable that an illness like that from which the king suffers must take some time to clear up, at least several days.

New York, April 8—Fanny Ward doesn't think it is slanderous to call a lady a cow.

The perennial flapper indicated this when her lawyers asked for a bill of particulars in a $50,000 damage suit filed by Miss Laura C. Wilson.

The bovine epithet was tossed, it is charged, when Fanny had a beauty parlor in Miss Wilson's building in East 50th st.

Not only did Fanny insinuate she was a cow but she called her a few other names that are not printable, Miss Wilson declared.

But Fanny wants to know now what they were, because at her age—she was a flapper in the Civil War, or was it the American Revolution?—her memory isn't quite what it was when Columbus discovered America.

SIX SAVED BY A PHONE GIRL

To the quick wit of Miss Gertrude Stanley, chief night operator of Geneva exchange, six Dorchester residents owe their lives today.

Coal gas, escaping from a furnace in the house at 6 DeWolf st., had overcome several of the occupants and was fast overcoming the others when Miss Helen Malaka, 23 attempted to telephone for help.

Miss Stanley heard only the choking voice calling for aid, but she quickly despatched police and a doctor to the address.

They found Miss Malaka, Joseph Cidlevich, 32, a gassed war veteran, and his wife, Mrs. Eva Cidlevich, unconscious from the gas, and Miss Anna Malaka, 22, Ralph Cidlevich, 8, and Lillian Cidlevich, 1, only semi-conscious.

The victims were revived and police repaired the defect in the furnace.

vacation when he became ill.

An oxygen tent was used in treating him yesterday. His physicians said it was used solely as a precaution.

Capital Speculates on Longworth's Illness

Washington, April 8 (AP)—The illness of Nicholas Longworth emphasized speculation here today on what might happen in the next Congress.

A comfortable Republican majority last session put Longworth back in the speaker's chair he had occupied for four years. In the seventy-second Congress, however, Republicans will have only one or two more votes than Democrats. A few defections from either party could switch control.

The day the last Congress adjourned sine die and he became technically plain "Representative Longworth, Republican, Ohio," the Speaker told the assembled legislators that something higher than they would have a hand in the establishment of the new House.

"Perhaps this is the last time I will address you frc . this rostrum," he said. "It is only an all-wise Providence who is going to determine which of the two major parties will organize the next House.

"With whatever that Providence may decree, I am abundantly satisfied."

Hoover Asks Reports on Longworth's Illness

Washington, April 8 (AP)—President Hoover followed closely today reports of the condition of Speaker Longworth, ill with pneumonia at Aiken, S. C.

He instructed his personal physician, Capt. Joel Boone, to keep in close touch with the speaker's condition and to keep him advised.

CURLEY GIVES G. A. R. LUNCH

Mayor Curley again today scored lack of national defense in New England after he warmly welcomed members of the G. A. R. to a luncheon he gave in their honor at Ford Hall.

He reviewed his proclamation of Army Day, stating the New England area forces at a strength of less than 500 officers and men and deplored the failure of public sentiment to force a remedy.

"Your ranks are thinned in number, but stalwart in spirit," he told the veterans.

"From your 85,000 members at the beginning to less than 1000 i nthis State now you have a fine record to look back upon. Your ranks have been the backbone of this country," he said.

R. I. ELOPERS MARRIED IN LAS VEGAS

Couple Found Living in Bungalow; Love Will Endure, Girl Says

Hollywood, April 8 (US)—He's so much in love with her that he comes home from work every day at noon to have lunch with her. (Ask any wife about that.)

And she is so much in love with him that she risked a $500,000 inheritance to marry him. (Ask any husband about that.)

He is Edward Priestly, Jr., $20-a-week mill hand, and she is the former Violette Jolley, 18, Rhode Island sub-deb, daughter of a wealthy mill owner, whose elopement caused her father to have private detectives make a nation-wide search for her.

Today they were found by Universal Service in their cozy, five-room bungalow. Priestly had come home for lunch. His bride, as brides do, had greeted him with a hug and a kiss.

"We're happy and we're in love, if that's what you want to know," they chorused.

WILLING TO SACRIFICE

In Harrisville, R. I., Priestly, 18 years old, worked in the mill of Charles W. Jolley, the bride's father, whose indignation at their elopement has cooled off somewhat. In Hollywood young Priestly is employed by an automobile finance company.

"I've got the girl I love, a job—and that's happiness," he said today.

"I married Edward because I loved him. Ours is a love that will endure. I have been used to money, but I'm willing to sacrifice everything for Edward, because I love him," said the pretty blonde bride.

They first met three years ago when Jolley invited his employes for a day's outing at "The Pines," his vast estate, and to enjoy his new swimming pool. It was at the pool that Priestly and Violette began the romance that resulted in their elopement.

OUTSMARTED FATHER

"It wasn't a case of love at first sight," Mrs. Priestly explained. "We grew to like each other and then we were in love. We know we disregarded the advice of our parents, but what are you going to do when you are in love?"

When her parents discovered her romance with Priestly they resorted to a ruse to separate them. Jolley obtained a position for Priestly in Washington, D. C. The boy accepted and February 6 was set as the day for his departure.

Violette announced her intention of attending a winter carnival in New Hampshire. February 8 Priestly eloped in his roadster. They were married at Las Vegas, N. M., and came on to Hollywood. Mr. Jolley's detectives searching for them everywhere.

The New York district attorney's office received a letter from Mrs. Grace Strasmick, dated in Boston, informing them that Marion Strasmick, better known as Marion Roberts, former Ziegfeld Follies girl, who figured as a witness in the shooting of Jack "Legs" Diamond, in New York, is living in the gang king's armored fortress at Acra, N. Y. New York officials said she was living with "Legs" Diamond and his wife, Mrs. Alice Diamond, but insisted that they could not take action to aid the Boston mother, because Marion is "over 21." HONEYMOON IS SPENT AT CRIBBAGE

Lynn Indian Fighter and Whaler and Widow Wed Month, the Returns Show

Ten years ago, when both were 62, they began to argue about getting married. They couldn't agree who would be boss.

On March 3 last, having been unable to settle the question, they up and did it anyway, a marriage return to Lynn City Hall disclosed today.

CRIBBAGE HONEYMOON

The newlyweds are George W. Mosher, widower, Indian fighter and whaler, and his housekeeper, Mrs. Emma Maynard, a widow. At their home, 18A Ellis st., Lynn, they were engaged in a snappy game of cribbage today when a reporter arrived.

"Fifteen, two," said Mosher. "Married? Sure we're married. Called a justice of the peace in a month ago. About time, too; we've been friends 36 years. Fifteen, two, I said, Emma."

"We should have been married 10 years ago," said his bride, "but we couldn't agree who'd be boss. A month ago we decided George would have his say and I'd have mine. Anyhow, how could I change an old Indian fighter like George?"

CUSTER'S HARD LUCK.

"Yes, sir," said Mosher, "I ran away from Wenham at 16 and joined Co. A of the Eighth U. S. Infantry and fought in the West against the Indians. I was 40 miles away from Custer when he was killed."

That, one gathered, was Custer's hard luck.

"Have you folks been on a honeymoon?" the couple was asked.

"Say," said Mosher, "if you call going on a honeymoon this thing they do to Niagara Falls and back again, we haven't."

"What's the use of traveling all around on a honeymoon when you've been everywhere, seen everything and done everything? I've been in every big port in the world. I've been shot at by hundreds of redskins and hit quite a few. Once I've been shipwrecked in the Arctic on a whaler and I've been shipwrecked in Midatlantic. I've been a soldier and I've been a sailor and I've been married twice and I'm joined at the chins.

"Honeymoon! . . . Fifteen, two, I said, Emma!"

An argument over "Who'll be the boss?" held up the wedding of George W. Mosher, 72, and Mrs. Emma Maynard, both of Lynn, for ten years until last March 3. Then they decided that each would have a say in directing affairs of the house and slipped away and were married. (Staff photo.)

HERMIT SLAYS BOY OVER GIFT

Monticello, N. Y., April 8 (INS)—George Harrison Trombley, brother-in-law of City Judge Charles Scot of Yonkers, today led a group of local residents to a hut in the woods near here and showed them the body of Isaac Tyler, 14, of Livingston Manor. Trombley said, according to police, that he had shot the youth.

Trombley walked into the post-office this morning and said:

"Well, I just killed a kid. Shot him twice."

The searching party was then organized. The boy was found to have been shot twice through the heart.

"I promised to give him a phonograph, then I changed my mind," Trombley told the state police. "He got sore, so I killed him."

Trombley, who is 37 years old, was well known to school children, who considered him a hermit.

COOLIDGE WILL OPEN OLD WINE

Worcester, April 8 (AP)—A hundred years ago the American Antiquarian Society assumed the custody of a bundle of manuscripts and a bottle of old Madeira wine. Through the century the manuscripts, some of them priceless autographs, have been carefully preserved. The black bottle of wine has reposed in the archives just as it was when it was placed there by Christopher Columbus Baldwin, librarian.

Manuscript and wine commemorate the centennial celebration in October, 1821, of the birth of Worcester County.

The day approaches when the final act in an antiquarian drama will be staged, probably at the annual dinner in Worcester of the Council of the Antiquarian Society of which Calvin Coolidge is president. The manuscripts will be examined and the bottle will be opened.

The manuscripts include a lengthy account of the proceedings on October 4, 1831, by Mr. Baldwin.

MAY QUIT N. Y. FOR $860,000

Buffalo, N. Y., April 8 (AP)—Clayton C. Woods and four relatives who won approximately $860,000 on the Grand National Steeplechase were anxiously awaiting the opinion of the Buffalo corporation counsel today as to whether they could collect their money and continue to live in Buffalo.

John J. Aeschbach, city director of welfare, has asked the corporation counsel for an opinion on a section of the poor law providing that the proceeds of lotteries shall be forfeited "to the use of the poor."

Woods and his wife were in Canada today on a vacation. Other members of the family who shared in the prize declined to discuss the matter.

It has been pointed out that the Woods family may evade the provisions of this law by transferring their legal residence to Ireland, where the money is to be paid this week.

Chicago, April 8 (INS)—To be kidnaped by bandits and driven away at a terrific speed while pursuing policemen fired shots at the automobile was the exciting experience of Mrs. Edgar J. McDonald, former premiere danseuse of the Chicago Civic Opera Company; her husband and another woman.

After the bandits had shaken off the police during a flight from Evanston into Chicago, they leisurely robbed their victims of money and valuables amounting to $1395.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald and Mrs. Frank J. O'Donnell were sitting in their automobile in front of their Evanston home when two armed men jumped into his car. The kidnaping was accomplished at the threat of death.

FINNS AND U. S. IN SAME FIX

Helsingfors, Finland, April 8 (AP)—A petition signed by over 100,000 women of Finland asking speedy repeal of the prohibition law is to be presented to the President.

The women express anxiety over the fate of future generations because of what they alleged to be a continuous spread of drunkenness.

"We feel ourselves powerless," the women declare, "while prohibition, with its destructive moral consequences exists, instead of a sensible law for controlling consumption of alcohol under which it would be possible to begin truly effective temperance work."

Prohibition in Finland, the petition said, is supported only by fanatics and over a hundred thousand bootleggers.

Kaufman vanished in the woods above Jackman while hunting last fall.

"I am keeping in touch with the authorities in Jackman," said Wechsler today at the Converse Rubber plant in Malden, where he is treasurer, "and as soon as the weather is favorable, we will resume the search.

Hultman Leaves Gandhi's Costume to Weatherman

The sartorial situation surrounding Mahatma Gandhi, if he comes to Boston, was commented upon today in a slightly divided and straddling way by Police Commissioner Hultman.

Shown the statement of Police Supt. Crowley that if Ghandi comes here he must wear more than is the custom, for instance, at L st., the commissioner said:

"Well, if he comes in the winertime, he will probably need at lot of clothing. If he comes in the summer time, he probably will not need so much. It will all depend upon what season he comes here."

South Bend, Ind., April 8 (AP)—The will of Knute K. Rockne, Notre Dame football coach, filed for probate here today, leaves the entire estate to the widow, Mrs. Bonnie G. Rockne.

Mrs. Rockne and the American Trust Co. were named jointly as executors of the estate. Rockne was killed in an airplane crash in Kansas last week.

Vitus E. Jones, attorney for the estate, said the estate, outside of the insurance, "is very modest." He declined to give the amount of insurance, which has been estimated at between $100,000 and $125,000.

Jones indicated there may be a controversy over the question of whether double indemnity should be paid on some of the insurance policies because of the accidental death of the famous coach.

BRITTEN FIGHTS ARMY-NAVY CUT

Washington, April 8—Aroused at reports that the administration may attack army and navy budgets in an economy move to minimize the treasury deficit and avoid a tax increase, backers of an adequate national defense today are mapping out a campaign of opposition.

The statements of President Hoover that congressional economy can avoid a tax boost is interpreted by advocates of a "treaty navy" as the opening wedge of a fight to prevent passage of a naval building program in the next Congress.

Representative Fred A. Britten (R) of Illinois, chairman of the House naval affairs committee, declared he would fight any attempt to reduce the navy.

He also pointed out that the steady building of ships in accordance with the London naval limitation treaty will provide steady employment for thousands of workmen.

CHILD WARNS OF WALL STREET CANDIDATE

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, April 8—Richard Washburn Child, former ambassador to Italy, who is now in Los Angeles, today gave to the Los Angeles Examiner and Universal Service an interview in which he declared that under cover a battle is now going on in which Wall Street seeks to capture both the Republican and Democratic parties.

Following is Mr. Child's interview:

"Want to see the present political situation?

"Then take your eyes off the strange pin wheel created by the conflict between peanut politicians and economic heat minds which has been going on in Washington.

LIKE SHAM BATTLES

"What do you see nationally? First of all the same old game of special interests trying to control nominations. Why wouldn't they? If I want anything in the way of a stranglehold on government what do I care who is elected provided I can nominate both men.

"The real contest is not an election. That is why elections have begun to seem like sham battles conducted with shoo fly oratory and pop gun propaganda. The real battles are going on now—under cover—the battles to capture control of both parties.

"For example, keep your eye on Raskob and Shouse, supposed to be impartial leaders of democracy's opportunity. Are they carving out a wide vision economic plan for a United States? In spite of a heralded engineer in the White House, and a Morrow and a Young whose wisdom, however respected, is broadcast from the microphone of a befuddled Wall Street, we are still in the woods. And they say Raskob and Shouse are busy with getting what downtown New York calls "a sound" candidate. The cards are stacked to make the prohibition question a sideshow, to keep the voters from seeing the performance in the big tent.

OPENING FOR THIRD PARTY

"The big tent today is the place to put on a sincere, independent, economic prosperity-saving general plan. Clowning with a feather duster of more emergency measures will not get by.

"If Hoover cannot get the country behind him by a convincing system of education, cannot learn to control what we call in politics 'the boys,' and if the Democratic party gets to be all Raskob fingers and Shouse thumbs and drops a chance to present a wide, clear, economic program with more sense than the present sweet tongued university degreed Wall Street has shown, even in its own bailing up of its own business, there never was a better opening for the nuisance of a third party.

"As I see it, any organized liberal party would have to have in its basket a simple paraphernalia but one hard to get. Economic protection by insurance but not dolea.

"The betting is against any party even a third party running with that ball. But I can point out to the two old parties that the American vote is a good deal larger than either of them, that a Roosevelt and a La Follette could and did indirectly swamp a Taft and a Davis, and that if the American people see the two old parties both go after the things the bankers call 'sound,' then we will see fireworks."

2 DOCTORS ARE HUNTED IN SLAYING

sell was near death was made that night.

As to the part the second physician is suspected of playing in the murder mystery, investigators were silent. Both doctors live and have offices on roads leading into Rhode Island from the direction of Watuppa reservation.

From the new evidence, Massachusetts investigators seeking the son of Rep. Louis E. Hathaway for a trial that would place him in jeopardy of the electric chair, reconstruct events on the murder night as follows:

In Watuppa reservation, in Massachusetts, Miss Russell was strangled by a man attempting a criminal attack.

Terrorized by his discovery that she had lost consciousness and not certain that she was dead, her companion sped to the office of a doctor with whom he was friendly.

There a pulmotor or inhalator was used, in such haste or with such lack of skill that two teeth were knocked from a bridge of the dead girl's mouth, falling on the floor.

CROSSED WIRE

While attempts at resuscitation were made, the slayer or the doctor telephoned someone from the doctor's office to Truesdale Hospital.

On a crossed wire with one of the two new witnesses, he engaged in an argument as to rights on the line, saying:

"Get off the line. There's a nurse on my hands—Miss Russell—of the Truesdale Hospital. I don't know whether she'll live or die."

When it became apparent that the girl could not be revived, her slayer and his physician friend sat down and discussed what should be done—the murderer protesting that he had not meant to kill her, the doctor protesting that he had done so nevertheless.

Finally decision was reached to drive the body a short distance from the office and leave it in Rhode Island. This was done.

Later the doctor discovered the teeth in his office and realizing that if they were not found near the body it would be indisputable evidence the murder was committed elsewhere, he took them to the spot which already had been searched for them without success.

IMPORTANT CLUE

The discovery of the teeth in Tiverton 36 hours after the body was found there, despite a previous search, was a clue upon which Massachusetts authorities centered much attention.

The chief's conduct has hurled a bombshell into the Massachusetts probe as the officers had expected to secure valuable information from him regarding the finding of the girl's teeth and paper drinking cups in the lane 57 hours after her body was found.

Potter was adamant and to all questions would make only the laconic response, "The report has been turned in to the Rhode Island state police."

State Detectives John Stokes, Joseph Ferrari and Francis Clemmey made a visit to Tiverton yesterday and called on Chief Potter.

The Massachusetts officers also revealed that they had received information from a Fall River woman, whose name is being withheld, that she had heard a frenzied call for help for a Truesdale hospital nurse, over a crossed telephone wire on the night of Miss Russell's murder.

It was revealed that the call was made at approximately 11:15 p. m. and was not completed.

The woman told the officials she was calling the hospital as there was sickness at her home and she wished a doctor. As the connection was being made the wire opened and she heard a man's voice calling for medical aid.

She asked him to get off the line as she was trying to get the hospital. He answered that he wanted the hospital, too, and wanted aid for one of the nurses there, named Miss Russell. He said she was with him and he didn't know "whether she was alive or dead."

The woman then said she heard a scream, which, she said, sounded like that of a woman. At that she hung up the receiver.

Newton Barber Quizzed on Shaving Hathaway

Trooper Harvey of the Rhode Island State police and Inspector Timothy Donovan of Boston police headquarters went to Newtonville late today to visit a barbershop where, it is reported, Elliott R. Hathaway, alleged murderer of Verna Russell, had his mustache removed while he was in hiding here.

According to Hathaway's lawyer, Samuel I. Jacobs, the Fall River man shaved his own mustache off in the Hotel Nixon, North Attleboro, on March 26, while waiting to surrender to Rhode Island authorities.

ACCUSES POLICE CHIEF

Mrs. Mabel Simmons of Tiverton, R. I., who charges police of that town, as well as Rhode Island state police, have refused to arrest a man who attacked her.

M'LYMAN FAILS IN 'SHEIK' QUIZ

By BEN BOYDEN

Providence, April 8—Atty.-Gen. Benjamin M. McLyman denied vigorously today that politics was exerting any influence in his investigation of the Verna Russell murder.

He had attempted to question Elliott R. Hathaway, but the accused slayer, on advice of counsel, had refused to answer, he said.

He denied that he had promised immunity to Vernon W. Galvin, Hathaway's friend, whose story forms the basis of the government charge against Hathaway.

"I have made no promises whatever to Galvin," he said.

Hathaway gained the right to refuse to answer questions when the warrant charging him with murder was issued. This warrant was sought before Hathaway was in custody in order that a case might be presented in court so Galvin could be held in bonds as a material witness, the Attorney-General said.

He personally went to North Attleboro to place Hathaway under arrest because he wasn't sure just what was going to happen there and felt no time should be lost, he said.

The report on a chemical analysis of the slain nurse's organs, expected today from Dr. Lester Rounds, State pathologist, will be kept secret, McLyman said. So, too, will be the full report of Dr. Charles Bryant, medical examiner, who found the girl was strangled to death.

The Attorney-General said he was still interested in the report that Miss Russell was killed in a house, either in Massachusetts or Rhode Island and that State troopers were still checking roadhouses near the State line in an effort to determine whether Hathaway and the girl visited one on the night of the crime.

THUG ALLOWED TO GO FREE BY POLICE

By a Staff Correspondent

Fall River, April 8—Charges of negligence and laxity in another case were made today against Rhode Island police by a Tiverton woman to Massachusetts State detectives. She is Mrs. Mabel Simmons, 32, of Fish rd., North Tiverton.

She charges Chief George W. Potter of Tiverton and the Rhode Island police with negligence and failure to proceed in a case of attack upon her almost resulting in murder, and which did cause the death of her unborn child.

APPEALED TO GOVERNOR

She charges that both Tiverton and State police were acquainted with her assailant, whom she identified positively, but he is still at large.

Their only excuse in not proceeding against him is their assertion that he is in ill health, she claims. Her pleas for justice have extended even to the governor of the State but no action has been taken.

Mrs. Simmons said today that the conduct of the police in the murder of Verna Russell has opened her eyes to the seriousness of the situation in Rhode Island where, she asserts, citizens are not receiving the protection their police should give them. She has also demanded that Chief Potter be removed from office.

RECOGNIZED MAN

According to the story which she told to Massachusetts state detectives and later to a representative of the Boston Evening American, Mrs. Simmons was returning to her home in Fish rd., where she lives with her husband, George L. Simmons, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Fish, at dusk on December 12, last.

About a mile from her home, she says, she was seized and thrown to the ground. Recognizing her assailant, a 19-year-old Tiverton youth, she struggled to free herself.

The youth struck her twice. She was in a delicate condition at the time and a month later her child was stillborn. Autopsy revealed a crushed skull, presumably resulting from the attack.

Two weeks ago she went to Governor Case and related the circumstances to him. The governor expressed amazement that nothing had been done concerning her case. He told her the case had been brought to his attention by Col. Chaffee, but he had destroyed his memorandum on it when informed by the colonel that an investigation was under way.

1450 Pennies, Boy's Savings, Go to Poor

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 8 (AP)—Little Marvin Cunningham lugged a heavy sack into Martinsburg's social service mission.

There were 1450 of them, his savings of the past three years.

Convicts Talented as Love Makers Via the Mails

New York, April 8 (AP)—Convicts at Sing Sing are prolific and in some cases excellent writers of love letters.

The convicts get the names of the lovelorn from matrimonial bureaus and, in writing, give only the street address of the prison in Ossining.

"Driven by their loneliness and the monotony of prison life to express themselves on paper," Commissioner Fagan said, "men in prison become prolific letter writers and sometimes develop a genius for expression."

ROSENDAHL TO FLY BIG AKRON

Washington, April 8 (AP)—Lieut. Cmdr. Charles E. Rosendahl, who knows more about airships in fair sailing and disaster than any other American, today was named first skipper of the Navy's new queen of the skies, the dirigible ZRS-4, better known as the Akron.

Rosendahl was ordered to the naval air station at Lakehurst, N. J., April 15, to begin assembling a crew for the new airship from the personnel trained aboard the Los Angeles, the dirigible given to this country by Germany under the treaty of Versailles.

Rosendahl is a survivor of the Shenandoah disaster and was for three years captain of the Los Angeles.

The Akron will be by far the largest flying craft in the world, with a cubical content two and a half times that of the Los Angeles, nearly double that of the Graf Zeppelin and 25 per cent larger than that of Great Britain's ill starred R-101, which crashed in France last year.

HEARST COMICS AIR FAVORITES

New York, April 8 (US)—"Bringing Up Father" and "Tillie the Toiler," radio programs based on the famous newspaper comics, have quickly become two of the favorites of the nation's air listeners, it was shown today as a number of additional stations joined the group presenting "Father" and "Tillie" weekly.

WJAS, Pittsburgh; WFBR, Baltimore; WHK, Cleveland, and WBRE, Wilkesbarre, Pa., have joined the Yankee chain, composed of seven New England stations, in obtaining radio broadcasts dramatizations of "Bring Up Father" and "Tillie the Toiler" as weekly program features. The stations in the Yankee chain are WNAC, Boston; WEAN, Providence; WLBZ, Bangor; WNBH, New Bedford; WORC, Worcester; WICC, Bridgeport, and WDRC, Hartford.

A number of additional stations are to be added to this list immediately, it was announced by M. J. Mintz, president of Cameo Broadcasting & Recording Studios, Inc., of New York, which is releasing the King features of the air.

These Spring Outfits Are Smart

By ANN ARDEN

IN THE spring a young girl's fancy turns to thoughts of new clothes and how to inveigle a larger allowance out of father. It's no wonder when new clothes are as charming and youthful as they are this season. Every color in the rainbow flaunts a gay face to the world, and each new dress, suit or coat seems even more becoming. Makes us wish we were in our teens again.

ONE OF the most practical dresses that will finish out the semester is a two-piece affair, the straight pleated skirt is made of flat crepe in navy blue. The peplum blouse is rasberry colored and adorably scalloped. This type of frock is also stunning in brown combined with opaline green or yellow. Worn with a silk or wool coat to match the color of the skirt it makes the perfect ensemble.

CONTRASTS appear in scarfs, blouses, collars and cuffs for both suits and dresses in dark colors. Skirt in dark colors, blouse or jackets in light tones have same or contrasting colors.

WITH SUITS in the high fashion favor which they are at the moment, brides will find themselves turning toward them as well as the college girl. You can choose them in such versatile styles, from the very tailored to the more elaborate dressmaker types. And they are tremendously chic for this last exciting departure from home.

THE PIN-CHECK tweed scarf suit has an early spring personality expressed in a fitted jacket with a collarless neckline, and a pleated skirt. A jaunty plaid scarf ties through the lapels and falls below the trim belted waistline.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs, or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser or to Station WLEX.

LETTERS By READERS

Sunday Radio Ads Out

Editor Boston American:

It pleased me greatly to read in one of the editions of your paper that Canada had eliminated all advertising from Sunday radio programs forbidding mention of the sponsor's name, address and nature of his business and product. This is a sensible move. Would to goodness it was taken up in some sections of this country!

RICHARD D. SCOFIELD.

Money in Cougars

Editor Boston American:

There are all sorts of ways to make money. A man in the northeastern county of Washington captures cougars alive and sells them in the East for $200 to $300 each.

Another young man sells the pelts of these animals, and, making over $300 this winter, gave one-tenth of every dollar he made to the church he attends.

N. H. McCAIN.

Adults Need Education

Editor Boston American:

The murders that I read about in your paper make me more than ever convinced that education of adults is needed now in this machine mass-production age. The life of an adult today is out of shape. It must be straightened, enriched or in many cases his best spirit will die. This is true of many adults that rush thoughtlessly into the committal of dreadful deeds without any qualms of conscience.

N. H. LITTLE.

For N. E. Hall of Fame

Editor Boston American:

Is it not about time that in Boston we had a Hall of Fame for all New England?

We have more heroes in this section that have made the history of this country and have not yet been honored sufficiently, except in lecture courses and books. We want the New England Hall of Fame right here in Greater Boston. So say we all of us who love New England.

JEREMIAH H. HALEY.

5-Day Week Coming

Editor Boston American:

Is this country ready for the five-day week? I believe, with Henry Ford, that it is. It is bound to come. I heard from a reliable source that 50 or more industries are putting it into effect. To crowd business for a time into five days a week, the more efficient it becomes.

N. H. MUNRO.

Children's Crimes

Editor Boston American:

Are the parents to blame for the children's crimes. When there is more knowledge in the world, few parents will be blamed for the crimes of their children.

Those are hidden secrets of God.

WORST WINTER STORM IN N. H.

Claremont, N. H., April 8 (AP)—Claremont was cut off from the rest of the world throughout the night and early today by the most damaging storm of the year. Telephone and telegraph service was completely disrupted. It was not until shortly before noon that the telegraph facilities were restored.

Power lines were crippled. Scores of poles were torn down and highways were littered with fallen trees.

The snowfall was from six inches in Claremont to 15 inches on the outlying hills.

Although 'tis springtime in New Hampshire, the Boston & Maine railroad had snowplows on the Keene, Contocook & White Mountain lines clearing away seven to 19 inches of wet, heavy snow.

Children's Day Is Proclaimed by Hoover

Washington, April 8 (AP)—President Hoover touched upon a subject in which he is intensely interested today in issuing a proclamation designating May Day as child health day.

The chief executive requested the governors of the states to declare May Day as a time for consideration of all measures for the health of children. In this connection he called attention to the "children's charter" formulated by the White House conference on child health and protection which was called largely as a result of the President's interest in child welfare.

Congress, in a resolution at the last session, authorized the President to proclaim annually May Day as child health day.

Women Spend $11.25 Month for Beauty

Chicago, April 8 (AP)—The average woman, it was estimated by Mrs. Florence E. Harris, president of the National Association of Boards of Beauty Culture, spends about $11.25 a month to be beautiful. Not counting $45 a year for "permanent curls."

'RACKET' PROBE BALKED BY FEAR

New York, April 8 (INS)—Witnesses' fear of retaliation by gangsters, who might wreck their business or take their lives, was the reason District Attorney Thomas C. T. Crain was balked in his grand jury investigation of the food "racket" in New York city.

Crain, on the witness stand today in the inquiry into his office, advanced this explanation of the fact the grand jury had returned no indictments.

"Witnesses refused to testify through fear of personal injuries or injuries to their business," he declared.

Crain's inquisitor was John Kirkland Clark, counsel to Seabury, who marshalled a score of witnesses as a result of nearly a month of secret investigation.

RUSSELL GIVEN THIRD TEST

Lawrence, April 8—The second surprise mental examination of Russell Noble, accused murderer, in four days, and his third examination in a week, was made today at Lawrence jail.

Just as on Saturday, Dr. Clarence A. Bonner, superintendent at Danvers State Hospital, and Dr. L. Vernon Briggs, noted Boston alienist, arrived at the jail unannounced, they "dropped in" today.

Young Noble, Haverhill High School senior who is charged with slaying Mrs. Clara E. Ellis, wealthy Haverhill widow, was immediately taken in charge by the alienists and, with a guard accompanying, they went into the hospital quarters in the north wing.

Here the alienists entered with Noble and closed the door, leaving the guard outside.

Before taking the accused youth with them, the alienists told Keeper George Bunting of the jail not to expect Noble at the noon dinner table, then one hour away.

When the examination of Noble was completed, it was an hour past dinner time, but neither this nor the examination appeared to disturb the accused youth.

Although neither Dr. Bonner nor Dr. Briggs would talk to reporters after the examination, Dr. Bonner told Keeper Bunting they would make at least one more examination before submitting their report.

CAMELS are wrapped Only in MOISTURE-PROOF Cellophane

Cigarettes in prime condition have a moisture content of about 10%. It will be seen by the chart that cigarettes in the ordinary wrapped package lose more than half of their total moisture in thirty days and that only the Camel Humidor Pack delivers cigarettes to you in prime condition.

THE whole country is talking about the throat-easy mildness and the factory freshness of Camel Cigarettes in the new Humidor Pack.

The above chart prepared by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory tells you why.

Please examine it carefully. It is an unfailing guide to cigarette selection and enjoyment.

As you can quickly see by the three upper curves on this interesting chart, cigarettes that lack the protection of the Humidor Pack lose their moisture rapidly from the day they are manufactured.

Not so with Camels!

Factory-fresh Camels are air-sealed in the new Sanitary Package which keeps the dust and germs out and keeps the flavor in.

Make these tests yourself

It is so easy to tell the difference between parched dry cigarettes and fresh prime Camels that it is no wonder everybody is reaching for a fresh cigarette today.

Your fingers identify stale, dried-out tobaccos at once. While a Camel is flexible and pliant.

Your ears can tell the difference too. For a dust-dry cigarette crackles under pressure.

But the real test is taste and there is simply no comparison between the rich mildness of a Camel and the hot, brackish smoke from a stale, dry cigarette.

Switch to Camels just for today then leave them tomorrow if you can.

● Artificial heat in houses and apartments soon dries the moisture out of cigarettes wrapped the old fashioned way. It is the mark of a considerate hostess, by means of the Humidor Pack, to "Serve a fresh cigarette." Buy Camels by the carton—this cigarette will remain fresh in your home and office.

ILLINOIS PARTY LAYS JAIL RIOTS TO CROWDING

Riots at Illinois State Penitentiary at Joliet are caused mainly because of overcrowded conditions and lack of work for the prisoners, Governor Ely was told today by members of a legislative committee from Illinois, who are inspecting prisons in various Eastern States.

Headed by Lieut.-Gov. Fred J. Sterling, the Illinois committee visited the State prison in Charlestown with Deputy Commissioner of Corrections Edward C. R. Bagley as guide.

PRISON GOODS SOLD

In the Illinois party were Senators Richard J. Barr, Arthur A. Huebsch and John J. Broderick; Representatives Rollo A. Robbins, Norman Childers and Michael L. Igoe, who also is Democratic national committeeman for Illinois, and William Hart, a newspaperman acting as committee secretary.

The Illinois investigators, during a long talk with Gov. Ely and Deputy Commissioner Bagley in the governor's office, listened with interest to Bagley's outline of the work program laid down for convicts here.

They evidenced surprise when Bagley told them that 85 per cent of the goods manufactured at State Prison and reformatories of Massachusetts are sold to city and state institutions, and that very little conflict is experienced with labor unions or labor officials.

ANGER IN CROWDING

Lieut.-Gov. Sterling, before his party inspected State prison, told Gov. Ely the committee was aiming, through its tour and studies "to avoid in the future things that have happened in the past at Joliet.

"The old parole hoard," he explained, "made it too easy for men to leave prison. The board was pounded for that by newspapers and others. A new board was chosen, but the new board leaned over backward and has paroled hardly anyone.

"Joliet is terribly overcrowded and they are sleeping two in a cell. The new Stateville Prison, also overcrowded but this is more like a de luxe hotel—radio service and all other conveniences and entertainment features.

"Massachusetts, in not permitting radio service in her prisons, is acting wisely. There is too much of crime going on the air."

RICHARD BARTHELMESS GIVEN STAR ROLE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
(Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, April 8—Nikki has been found. Production on John Monk Saunders' story, "The Single Lady" to be called "Spent Heroes," has been at a standstill because it has been impossible to locate the right girl. Every actress I know was eager to play the part of the one girl who pals around with these five war birds.

Helen Chandler finally won the prize. Although her part was not a big one in "Mother's Cry," she registered, "Outward Bound" gave her a little more opportunity but still she has never yet had the sort of role she should have. While Richard Barthelmess is the star and he is the chief war bird, he has been given a Louella O. Parsons cast of excellent players for the other four war birds, Johnny Mack Brown, Leslie Elliott Nugent and Frank Albertson. Frank Albertson has been borrowed from Fox and all negotiations were just closed yesterday. Wilhelm Dieterle is the director.

ALL'S WELL, that ends well. About six months ago Ross Hobart was brought here from New York to make "A Lady Surrenders" for Universal. A disagreement over salary and she asked to be released from her contract, saying she was through with the movies. A few months in New York and Miss Hobart returned to Hollywood and curiously enough, to Universal, the same company with whom she had disagreed.

That little battle seems to have cleared the air for now Carl Laemmle, jr. is giving Miss Hobart all the breaks. The best stories are being purchased for her. "Street" by Fannie Hurst to be directed by John M. Stahl; "Waterloo Bridge" by Robert E. Sherwood to be directed by James Whale, are on the list. Before either of these are made, Miss Hobart will be the chief feminine interest in "The White Captive" which George Melford starts directing, April 20, with Charles Bickford opposite her.

THOSE HEALTH enthusiasts who say that dieting is bad for the disposition, and that exercise is the only solution, should take a look at George Bancroft. George lost 30 pounds and his way of doing did the trick. He goes in every morning before breakfast at the Santa Monica Monica, and several times during the day. There is a look of peace in Mr. Bancroft's face, also. He has settled his difficulties with Paramount, and there will be no more battles. His next, "The Money King," goes into production almost immediately. What happened to "The Marines Have Landed?" Well, it has been discarded for Bancroft, and rewritten for William Boyd, Phillips Holmes and Richard Arlen.

I HAVE never seen Hollywood react to a death as it did to that of young Lowell Warner. The word came during the Mayfair dance and it cast a pall on the festivities. Everyone had been hoping that the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Warner would be spared. Everyone spoke of him as being such a fine, upstanding young man. He had been selected to carry on the Warner Brothers business and every move was made with him and young Jack Warner, son of the Jack Warners, in mind. What seemed particularly sad was that the boy had won in his battle with septic poisoning and was on the road to recovery when pneumonia set in. The entire motion picture industry sympathizes with the father and mother.

I HOPE Will H. Hays is serious in his statement that he intends to clean up the movies. So many of our producers are such excellent persuaders—and, well, there are so many ways of killing a cat. I know of several pictures about to go into production that could stand the censorable eye of Hays himself.

Heading the new vaudeville bill opening at Loew's Orpheum Friday will be Charles Withers in his famous comedy classic, "Wither's Opry." The famous character comedian is assisted in his hilarious offering by a large cast. The international star, Francis Renault, female impersonator, will be another important headliner. Maud Hilton and Garon in a dialogue skit, "A Gabfest," and Maxine Lewis, blues singer, are others on the bill, as well as John and Mary Mason in "Whirls and Twirls," a skating novelty. "City Lights" the most pretentious of Charlie Chaplin's film offerings, is the screen feature.

LOEW'S STATE PATRONS ARE PRAISING CHARLIE'S "CITY LIGHTS" THIS WEEK

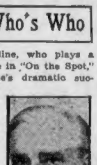
Stage Who's Who

John M. Kline, who plays a prominent role in "On the Spot," Edgar Wallace's dramatic success, at the Wilbur, tomorrow night, is early life embarked upon a business career. He thought destiny had cut him out for a banker, and became cashier of the Franklin Society. Progress there seemed too slow for him and the handling of other people's money held no special attraction so he turned over in his mind the selection of a different career. He had acted as an amateur in various plays put on by the Southern Society and the Amaranth Society of Brooklyn and always looked back with pleasure on the occasions on which he had donned grease-paint and wig, and determined to become an actor. Early in his stage career he obtained the lead for the road tour of "A Pair of Sixes" and later the role of Pliny Bangs in "Along Came Ruth." There followed a season in "Mary's Ankle" and two seasons in "The Girl in the Limousine."



John M. Kline

He was in the original production of "The Clansman" before it was made into a motion picture under the title of "The Birth of a Nation."

Norma Shearer Again on State Screen Friday

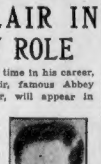
SINCLAIR IN NEW ROLE

For the first time in his career, Arthur Sinclair, famous Abbey Theater player, will appear in Boston as creator of a role written by an American author and as featured player of a modern comedy of the American scene, when Robert V. Newman's production of Patrick Kearney's play, "The Patch," has its premiers at the Plymouth next Monday. Since Mr. Sinclair's first appearance in America in 1911 (which first appearance incidentally marked the opening of the Plymouth) the Irish actor has devoted himself to repertoire, playing Synge's "Playboy of the Western World," most of the Sean O'Casey plays, and "O'Flaherty, V. C.," which George Bernard Shaw, his good friend, wrote for him a decade ago.



Arthur Sinclair

While Mr. Sinclair was playing in "Mr. Gilhooley," Mr. Newman suggested to him that he appear under his management in a vehicle written especially for him, and Patrick Kearney, young writer of "The American Tragedy," and "A Man's Man," was engaged to develop a completed manuscript with Mr. Sinclair's talents in mind.

Happily enough, an idea had been fomenting in the playwright's mind for many months which had for its important characters a pair of colorful Irish natives transplanted to the New World.

LEWIS EMERY IN RECITAL

By MOSES SMITH

Lewis Emery, baritone, sang a program of songs in French, German and English at Jordan Hall last night. For what was apparently a debut appearance there was a large number of "paying guests."

Mr. Emery, we have been told, is a retired business man. Having made his fortune, he would sing, returning, presumably, to an old love. His voice was disclosed as an excellent instrument, of fine quality, richer than that of most work-a-day baritones. The high notes in the baritone compass are reached without strain, but the low ones lack resonance.

Considering that in some respects Mr. Emery's technical equipment is unsound (which, after all, is not our affair), he achieves surprisingly good results. His enunciation was distinct, more in German than in English, because of insufficient care in pointing vowels. Yet these things are bare details. The most vivid impression remains that he sings because he likes to, and he makes his audience enjoy his singing. Moreover, he knows how to differentiate between one song and another. His enthusiastic reception by the audience was, therefore, richly deserved.

Sidney Fox has acquired a new pup. She calls him "Option" because, she says, he likes to be taken up.

Film Who's Who

Maurice Evans, who has the important role of Roger Bruce Smith in "Should a Doctor Tell?" the British Lion production featured at the Park, is notable for his forcible characterization of Lieutenant Raleigh in "Journey's End," during its phenomenal London run. He is a firm believer in the talkies and hopes to be in them permanently. A previous talking picture bit of his was in "Raise the Roof." The dialogue of "Should a Doctor Tell?" was written by Edgar Wallace.

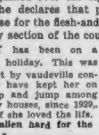
LEATRICE JOY SEES ROSY FUTURE FOR VAUDEVILLE

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

VAUDEVILLE IS on the comeback—strong! This is the conviction of Leatrice Joy, stage and screen star now headlining at the RKO Boston. Her opinion is backed up by first-hand knowledge gained over the big-time circuits through two long seasons. She declares that public favor is decidedly on the rapid increase for the flesh-and-blood, and that she had observed this in every section of the country.

MISS JOY has been on a lengthy film holiday. This was brought about by vaudeville contracts which have kept her on the hop, skip and jump among the seven-day houses, since 1929. I asked her if she loved the life.

"I have fallen hard for the footlights," she replied. "I was on the stage before ever I landed in Hollywood. So I have returned to my first love."



Leatrice Joy

"Are you out of pictures for good?"

"Not entirely, for I had overturned that past winter," she said. "But it was impossible, because my bookings were sold from last November until next month."

I asked her if she had met her heart's desire among mankind in her swing over the country.

"No," she answered. "I am still in the widow class, and not in love. Some day the man may come along and tell me he will take all my worries and pay all my bills, and lay his heart at my feet. But I am not looking for him."

MOVIE CAREER and love? Is marriage happy among the stars?

"Sure as you live," she averred.

"For example?

"Vilma Banky and Rod La Rocque. They have smashed all records, I think, for honeymooning. They've been wedded four years, and honest, they're as spoony as in the first flush. And there are Doug and Mary, Conrad Nagel is a devoted husband and happily married; so is Jack Holt. There are others, and among the non-professionals who are intimately associated with Hollywood, I'd like to mention Louella Parsons and her husband, Dr. Harry Martin, as happy as man and woman can be. And popular with the whole colony."

"She's a wonder," was her word. "An indefatigable worker, she knows all the news almost before the principals do; and she spends not one so fast that her many millions of readers daily know the inside dope before Hollywood is wise to developments. I'll wager she has more 'scoops' to her credit than any newspaper worker in the world. Her energy seems to be tireless; in the colony they wonder how she assembles all the facts, every day, while the news is hot. Everybody respects her, and many of us love her for her charming personality. Of all persons not in the industry and yet close to it, she is closer by miles than any other."

B. & M. FREIGHT LOSS HALTED, PRES. SAYS

Bounding an optimistic note, President Edward S. French of the Boston & Maine railroad, told stockholders assembled in annual meeting at the North Station today that the decline in freight business had been definitely halted.

The stockholders authorized issuance of $7,500,000 bonds for refunding and improvements, and 75,000 shares of prior preference stock for conversion of bonds, and re-elected all the directors.

In reply to queries of stockholders, he said the company has not yet officially determined its attitude on consolidations and that the Boston & Maine is doing its full share in advancing the interests of the port of Boston.

A question as to whether the 5% dividend on the common stock would be maintained brought the reply from Chairman Thomas N. Perkins of the board of directors that "it depends on whether business keeps up."

HEARST THANKS SCHOOL BOARD

Washington, April 8 (INS)—The North Cleveland Park Citizens Association had among its records today a telegram from William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, thanking its member for naming the model elementary school to be constructed here in memory of his mother, the late Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst. He also expressed his desire to attend the dedication of the school, on which construction will start June 15.

The association's recommendation that the new school be named "The Phoebe A. Hearst School" was unanimously adopted by the school board.

Mrs. Hearst founded the kindergarten system in Washington and also was co-founder of the Parent-Teachers' movement and the association wanted to perpetuate her memory for these efforts by naming the school in her honor.

Executioner Quits Post After Killing 12

Oklahoma City, April 2 (AP)—After sending 12 men to death in the electric chair, W. M. Treadwell has resigned as executioner at the State prison in McAlester.

"I've flipped the switch the last time," he said Monday. "I don't believe capital punishment is a crime deterrent." It should be abolished."

MAYOR GREETS REPAIR CHAMP

The champion shoe repairer of Massachusetts was greeted by Mayor Curley at City Hall today and received the key to the city. He is Karl Genesly of 435 Broadway, Somerville, who won the title at the fourth annual Shoe Repairers' and Dealers' exposition in Chicago recently.

Gennelly, who is 39 and married, came to this country as an immigrant boy, practically penniless. Today he owns two shoe repairing establishments employing 25 men.

His winning the championship was based on both speed and neatness among 10,000 contestants. A silver cup and medals were given as prizes.

Two-Gun Baker in New Speed Drive

HOOVER HIT AS 'INSULTING' IN ST. THOMAS

St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, April 8 (AP)—The newspaper St. Thomas Mail, in an editorial captioned "An Ill-Mannered Visitor," declares today that the Islands were "no poorhouse" when they were acquired by the United States, but that the application of "stupid and unsuitable federal laws" made them so.

"Thus any American," the editorial continues, "who insultingly alludes to the Virgin Islands today as a poorhouse can only be devoid of decency even though that individual be the President of the United States. He should have known better than to wound the susceptibilities of a loyal people.

"He has acted unlike the head of the nation, and instead of causing the people to depreciate his visit he should have made them revere his name by the honor the visit would otherwise have conferred on the Virgin Islands."

Medford Man Gets 10 Days After Crash

Stephen C. Mathewson of Woburn st., West Medford, arraigned in East Cambridge court today on three counts growing out of an automobile accident, was sentenced to 10 days in the House of Correction and fined $25.

Matherson was found not guilty of operating a care while under the influence of liquor after arresting officers testified a young woman was at the wheel of his car when it crashed into a tree in Belmont. A charge fo allowing an unlicensed person to drive his car resulted in the imposition of the fine. The jail sentence was imposed for drunkenness.

Dennison House Fund Endorsed by Curley

The Dennison House in Tyler st., one of the oldest of the South End settlement houses, is deserving of the support of the citizens of Boston, Mayor Curley told a group of women of that organization who called on him at City Hall today in connection with their drive for funds to carry on their work.

The mayor also made a substantial contribution toward the fund being raised and expressed the hope the drive will be a success.

Kurds Stage Revolt

London, April 8 (AP)—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Angora, Turkey, today said that a new insurrection was reported to have broken out among the Kurds on the frontier between Turkey and Persia.

JAIL SCIENTISTS TO GROW RICH, SCRIPPS' PLAN

New York, April 8 (AP)—Robert P. Scripps, president of Scripps-Howard Newspapers, had two alternatives today for the return of prosperity. They were:

Break up the machines, put the scientists in jail, and generally try to make clocks run in reverse, or:

Increase per capita spending, or leisure, or a combination of both, to balance increased potential per capita production.

"The potential per capita production of the individual worker is increasing much more rapidly than is population," he told the New York Board of Trade. "This has been brought about by application of science to industry—scientific organization as well as new mechanical inventions.

"In America, since at least 1910, although lack of statistics make it impossible to fix any date accurately, the pace of science has been an accelerating one, while the rate of population growth has decelerated, until now it tends toward absolute stability.

"Increased spending can be achieved in one, or both, of two ways. The simplest plan might be just greatly increased, and continuously increasing, hourly wages for labor. But no great stride along this line can be taken if all industry and business does not move as a unit. Some agency must be set up to insure that when 'A' starts out on such a course, 'B' does not lag behind and appropriate 'A's' profits before he knows it."

He suggested the board of trade might become the first such agency and said "the more action we can get unofficially, and outside of the political structure, the better off we will be in the long run."

Man About Town -:- By Al Duffy

Sob Story

When he played at our local Cathedral of the Cinema last summer he was at the peak of his success. A star in the movies who had zoomed breathlessly to popularity, his fan mail was said to be second only to Clara Bow's. After every performance during the week he was making personal appearances here, the girls flocked around to the stage door to get autographed pictures of their idol.

One of the men on the publicity staff of the theater became very pally with the star. He went to the newspapers and argued long and earnestly for him.

"Listen," he exhorted, "I'm telling you on my word that all of this adulation hasn't gone to his head. He's still a great kid—regular guy! Give him a break, willya?"

And the boys on the papers came through in great style for him. Interviews, press stunts, pictures—they went the limit for him.

When his week was up the star gave the p. a. an autographed picture. He wrung his hand sincerely.

"Listen," said the star, "I certainly appreciate all you've done for me. You've made this engagement one of the happiest I've ever had. And nowhere have I been given such publicity. I realize that I owe it all to you, too. You've done a great job and I only hope that you come to Hollywood some day. Then I can show you how much I really appreciate all you've done for me. I'll show you a time such as you've never seen before. And I'll see that you meet the right people, too. Why, before I get through I'll have you set in a REAL JOB. I'll take you out of the small time and put you in the big time."

Last week the p. a., vacationing in Hollywood, went out to the studios to see his pal. After a long wait the messenger who had taken his name returned.

"I'm sorry, sir," he said. "Mr. Rogers is busy making a picture just now and he has asked me to tell you that he won't be able to see you for several weeks."

George Hazzard tells the one (relayed to him by Fred "Three's a Crowd" Allen) about the magician who bet the manager of the Statler that he could escape from any room in the hotel. They locked him in room 901 at 10:30 on Tuesday night and, when nothing was heard from him by Friday, the house detective broke down the door. The magician, fast asleep in bed, was awakened by the noise. He arose, dressed in a leisurely fashion and then went down to the manager's office.

"That's no trick, old chap," he said. "I guess I lose but I don't mind. You see that's the first real sleep I've had since the talkies came in."

Natick Bungalow Destroyed by Mysterious Explosion and Fire

Mary Lou Warned by Larry in Note

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Mary Lou Thurston, a beautiful and vivacious girl of the "home" type, orphaned by the death of her parents, lives with her aunt and uncle, Clara and Howard Sanderson. The former is private secretary to a publisher, and the latter an engineer. Larry Mitchell, energetic young newspaper reporter, is Mary Lou's pal. Sanderson gets a wonderful business chance to go to the Orient and take his wife as secretary. Mary Lou is to stay temporarily with Grandma Jennings, Clara's mother. Larry is eager to marry Mary Lou and take care of her, but Mary Lou convinces him they are merely good pals and asks him to help her get a job. She applies at the Lorrimer's and is claimed by the son of the house as his war bride, named "Delight." Mary Lou qualifies as companion for Travers, who seems to find her different from his remembrance of his "wife."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

By FAITH BALDWIN

Author of "The Office Wife," "Alimony" and Other Famous Serials.

MARY LOU'S battered trunk, suitcase and box arrived safely at "Westwood House," forwarded by the faithful Larry, from whom she received a lengthy and wild letter, typed on yellow copy paper, demanding, cajoling, warning and pleading.

Did she realize what she was getting into? demanded Larry frantically. Would she never grow up? Of all the crazy, mad, insane and incredible schemes! However, count on him to stand by her, and if necessary, to get her out of this mess into which, idiotically, she appeared to have gotten herself. For himself, he could not believe a word of her explanation—that is, not with a sane and intelligent mind. And when could he come out and see for himself just what sort of monkey-business this appeared to be?

Not Ready Yet

But Mary Lou wasn't quite ready to face Larry yet. She wrote, also, to her uncle and Clara. It would be many weeks before the letters would reach them and months before she would have their answer. She realized, setting down the facts in careful pothooks, on "Westwood" paper, that it would all seem as unreal as a dream to the Sandersons. Well, it seemed unreal to her, she thought.

Yet her role was not hard to play, she found, as the days slipped by and gray snow clouds began to veil the horizon and there was a breath of sharp, frosty and menacing, in the air. For Lorrimer made it as easy for her as possible, trying to keep his word to his mother and Doctor Mathews. It would have been an act of inhuman self-control on his part not to refer to what he thought was their mutual past. That morning on which he had gone out to look for her and had found her at the kennels had passed quickly enough.

Gave Her Puppy

He'd given her the best police puppy, Konig, for her own, and had watched, with a hurting sort of pleasure in her happiness, her gentle, diplomatic overtures of friendship toward the beautiful, boisterous animal. Later, with Konig at his new owner's heels, they had gone back to the house, and Lorrimer had deliberately suffered the racing and barking and general rowdyiness of the pup, not wishing to spoil the girl's pleasure in her new possession, and had found, to his own amazement, that once he made up his mind he could not permit his nerves to rule him, he almost forgot the noisy accompaniment to their walk.

He was determined not to refer to the past in the deeply intimate personal sense. But he spoke, quite naturally, of the elapsed years and the hideous doubts which had consumed him. He asked, as casually as he could manage, what had happened to the cousins he remembered so well, and Mary Lou, thanking her lucky stars for the presence of the pup, managed, in her turn, to answer, her face averted, and

GUESTS FROM 33 COUNTRIES ARE PRESENT

Deans of Local Colleges Entertain Founders of Association

More than a thousand women delegates registered today at the opening session of the three-day conference of the American Federation of University Women at the Hotel Statler.

As guests of the American Association, university women from 33 foreign countries are present at the meeting. Many of them will speak on Friday about college activities in their own countries.

The report to be made tomorrow by Dr. Kathryn McHale, executive secretary of the association, who has recently completed a comparative study of leading American universities, is of particular interest to the women delegates.

Deans of the local women's colleges entertained the founders of the American Association at tea at the Gardner Museum today. Barnica Brown of Radcliffe, Frances Knapp of Wellesley, Jane Mesick of Simmons, Edith Bush of Jackson and Miriam Carpenter of Wheaton were hostesses.

John Erskine and Dorothy Canfield Fisher, authors, will speak at the educational dinner to be held at the Copley Plaza tonight.

GARRETT BLAST CALLED 'MYTH'

Officials at Charles st. jail refused to be disturbed today over a reported outburst of Oliver B. Garrett that quoted him ready to "tell all" if he was not bailed Officers of the jail were questioned by Sheriff John A. Keliher, but none could say where the report originated. Garrett would not be interviewed.

"If such a statement was made to some visitor of his it is no concern to us," Sheriff Keliher said.

"There has been no infraction of rules by Garrett since he was admitted here.

"Nobody has been found in the jail who overheard such remarks as reported."

Garrett, subject of two trials that ended in disagreement, was reported enraged because Judge Harold P. Williams refused him bail

A threat to tell all he knows about Boston politicians and police was the substance of the report.

"Why must I stay in jail while they walk the streets," he was quoted.

Mrs. Garrett, accompanied by Atty. Herbert F. Callahan, counsel for the former police raider, made a second attempt to see Judge Harold P. Williams today at the courthouse

Judge Williams was busy, but sent word he would see them in open court later in the day if they wished

SOUND MIND FOR YOUTH URGED

Parents owe children the assurance of a sound mind as well as sound body, Judge Frederick P. Cabot of the Boston Juvenile Court said today, speaking at the report luncheon of the men's committee of the $1,100,000 Judge Baker Foundation Fund at the Chamber of Commerce

Judge Cabot stressed the importance of juvenile prevention work in church in early childhood through agencies that in adult life lead to unhappiness and misery

"A new worry has been added to parenthood," he continued. "The parent has now learned that he must see that the child has a sound mind, for we know that the mind and its health are as important in the life of a human being as the body and its health. Public intelligence is gradually accepting this fact

"I do not doubt that we shall one day see as many splendid hospitals and clinics for prevention of sick minds and their cure as we now see for the same end for sick bodies"

At tomorrow's meeting Dr. A. Warren Stearns, State commissioner of correction will address the women's committee at the Junior League rooms

LYNN ANNOYER TRAPPED BY BEAUTY

Girl Collapses in Court, Corridor After Telling Judge Her Story

How a pretty Lynn girl trapped a would-be admirer for police was revealed today in Lynn court when Frank Clark, 35, of Williams st., Lynn, twice married, pleaded guilty to annoyance.

The girl, a resident of Rockaway t., Lynn, collapsed in the court corridor after she testified to Clark's quest for a "date." Her name was withheld

Clark, father of one child and stepfather to two of his second wife's, was assessed $10 costs, was given a three months' suspended sentence and placed on probation for a year.

It all started a few days ago, the girl told the court, with receipt of a letter signed "A Friend". The letter told of a new automobile and included the invitation to go for a ride

The letter was turned over to Sergt. James Fee of the police vice squad and the girl was urged to keep the proposed appointment at High and Essex sts.

In a shiny automobile Clark drove up, met the girl—and then the police

He admitted authorship of the letter in court and said the name of the girl had been given to him by a friend

CURLEY NOT TO ARGUE ON BILLS

Mayor Curley in a letter to the legislature committee on municipal finance today with his request for a chance to argue for his bills for borrowing outside the debt limit for various construction projects.

The mayor had asked the legislature for authority to go ahead with projects, the cost of which totaled more than $17,000,000, and there were other Boston bills, not introduced by the mayor, which increased this figure to more than $30,000,000

The committee read the letter and then in executive session went on record as opposed to re-opening discussion of the projects, a superfluous move in view of the message

Of the $33,000,000 projects the committee had deported favorably for $2,000,000 for schools on ten-year bonds; $1,000,000 for streets, half of which shall be within the debt limit; $250,000 for airport improvements and $250,000 for a municipal building in Charlestown.

SAWYER DEMANDS STATE CLEANUP IN CROOKED STOCK DEALS

THOUSANDS ARE ROBBED, HE DECLARES

Files an Order for Warner to Take Charge of New England Investors' Case

Rep. Roland D. Sawyer of Ware today filed an order with the clerk of the House directing Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner to assume charge of the prosecution of officials of the New England Investors Shares, Inc.

The organization filed a petition in bankruptcy in the federal court on March 1, 1925. Several of the officials are now under indictment.

In commenting upon his order, Rep. Sawyer said:

"It appears that Massachusetts has become the dumping ground of a great many tricksters and crooks. We have had in recent years Ponzi, the L. A. W., the Decime organization, two or three bankrupt chain store organizations that have robbed many of our citizens, and now these investment shares, whose report on public file shows the sale of more than $1,500,000 in worthless stock and whose total liabilities run, I am told, to above $3,000,000.

"One poor old woman, with tears in her eyes, held out to me her toil worn hands and told of 40 years' service in domestic work and of her frugal savings of over $6000 taken from her by a bunch of crooks.

ASKS SPEEDY ACTION

"She is one of the thousands thus robbed in this State. The situation certainly demands that the Legislature should direct that the chief law officer of the State secure proper punishment for the offenders.

"They could receive such punishment as will give warning to men in New York, Canada and other places that Massachusetts is no longer a safe place for the pushing of crooked stock sales."

CURLEY ADMITS IT'S SOME JOB, ALLEE SAME!

If he could only speak Chinese—But Mayor Curley can't, and that, he said, wrecks a very entertaining rumor which was cavorting about City Hall today.

The rumor was that he had been offered a contract at $150,000 a year for three years by the Chinese government to reorganize its finances.

It had all tongues wagging.

"I haven't received any such offer," the Mayor said, "but let me say that it is a very attractive proposition—only I can't speak Chinese."

One reason why the rumor was believed by many is that Mayor Curley has been tremendously popular with influential Chinese since he suggested sending this nation's wheat surplus to the millions of starving citizens of China, as a 40-year, non-interest-bearing loan.

Only recently he sent a flag of the city to Admiral S. K. Tu, secretary of the Chinese navy, and yesterday he received the daughters of the Chinese home secretary and the minister for foreign affairs.

Depositors of the closed Industrial Bank & Trust Co. will hold a meeting tonight at the Dorchester Women's Club to discuss plans for the organization of a protective committee to represent them. Frank Wilson will preside.

A second meeting will be held tomorrow night at the Dorchester High School for Girls, Codman sq., Dorchester, for the same purpose.

The Industrial Bank & Trust Co., with total deposits of $2,312,000, including $115,500 of city funds, and $800 Greater Boston depositors, was closed March 19, by order of Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy.

Draftsmen Kept on Job by Mayor Curley

PUPILS' SPREE STIRS UP ROW

Peabody police and school heads were a-todds today over alleged liquor conditions at Wallis grammar school, five pupils of which were reported under the influence of wine in class yesterday.

Reports of bootlegging among the school children were denied by Mayor J. Leo Sullivan and School Superintendent Thomas W. Sheehan, but their denials brought a report from Chief of Police Edward F. Pierce.

"Joseph Gilmore, principal of the Wallis grammar school, came to me and said a boy had bought a quart of wine from a bootlegger," Chief Pierce said today. "When he told me he had no evidence, I told him we couldn't raid without it, but would investigate.

"I sent an officer to home of Peter Kjarmes on Shillaber st. and the officer bought a gallon. Then we raided and seized 50 gallons."

PINS HOPES ON THIS DATE

Still smiling, although a jury found him guilty of the murder of "Jake" Lingle and set his sentence at 14 years, Leo Brothers tells his mother, Mrs. Rose Jessen, who has stood by him from the beginning, that on April 17, the date he is indicating, a hearing on his motion for a new trial will be given. AN ARTIST IN EMBROIDERY

Pastho Alconada of 12 Church pl., Roxbury, drives a truck, but he spends his spare hours embroidering. He doesn't make French knots on pillow covers or cross stitches on guest towels.

But Pastho is an artist. He draws pictures on linen and fills them in with solid embroidery. His latest work is a likeness of the Virgin Mary with her heart pierced by the Sword of Sorrows. It is done in deep, rich colors—blue, gold, crimson and green.

The artist has just finished the picture and will soon start on an accompanying portrait of the Blessed Father.

3 Plead Guilty to Federal Rum Charges

Pleas of guilty to indictments charging them with violating the national prohibition act were made before Judge James A. Lowell in Federal court today.

Augustus Sylvester, 42, of Hunting st., Cambridge, was sentenced to five years. The sentence was suspended.

William S. Crowell, of East Braintree, pleaded guilty to an indictment charging illegal transportation. John Duffy, of Phillips st., Roxbury, pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with illegal possession and transportation.

Fall or Kick Blamed for Death of Girl

Angelina Barbano, of Newton, died from peritonitis following an injury, it was disclosed today in a report of Judge John C. Lynch of Newton court, who conducted an inquest at the request of Dist. Atty. Warren L. Bishop, of Middlesex County.

The injury might have been caused by either a fall or a kick, the report said. The girl's death was described as a mystery two weeks ago.

'BOYS IN BLUE' RELIVE YOUTH IN GLORIOUS WAR MEMORIES

Mayor Curley Honors Civil War Vets' Head—351 Years of G. A. R. Quartet Harmony in Action

ENCAMPMENT TO END TODAY AT BANQUET

National Commander Jewell and Mayor Curley to Be Speakers

"Do you remember——?"
"At the Battle of Chicamauga——"
"Now, in 1863——"

The years have rolled away for that ever-thinning line of "boys in blue," who are celebrating the second day of the 65th annual State encampment of the G. A. R. at Faneuil Hall today.

In little groups, heads close together, they shake off the feebleness of age to relieve the glory of their youth in vivid recollections.

And not the least spirited of the meager 100 who are attending what may be the last encampment for many is 95-year-old William R. Dempsey of Melrose, the oldest Massachusetts veteran present.

WITH LEE IN TEXAS

He remembers the year 1858 when, as a private, he served under Col. Robert E. Lee, of the United States army, on the dusty plains of Texas.

"Do you know," he reminisces, "of all the officers I can recall, Robert E. Lee was the only one who always appeared on the drill field groomed as an officer should be. Never a button out of place, never a hat awry, always clean-spoken. We were boys then and we loved him—even if he did fight against us afterward—"

"I was under John B. Hood in that year, too. He was my first lieutenant then, long before he was made a general. We never could understand why he fought with the rebels.

PLEDGED TO FLAG

"One day during the secession trouble he drew us up on the field and pointed to the United States flag and said:

"'Boys, as long as there's a star in that flag I'll stand by it.'

"But when the war broke out he switched over and we stuck to our side. I think he knew all along he was going to do it. But it's all over now."

Tales of battles, of hardships, of thrilled moments in victory, and sorrowful ones in defeat, came from a staunch old soldiers collected together at the one period they perish in the year.

Today delegations from the Women's Relief Corps, auxiliary to the G. A. R., the Grand Army of the Republic, Daughters of Union Veterans, Sons of the Union Veterans and their auxiliary, paid respects to the veterans in Faneuil Hall.

Last night many of the veterans were guests of the Women's Relief Corps at a banquet at the Hotel Statler.

MAYOR HONORS G. A. R. HEAD

SONGS OF OTHER DAYS

Old Songs. Songs that they sang in the dark hours of the Civil War were put right back into circulation yesterday at the encampment of the Massachusetts G. A. R. in Faneuil Hall. "Marching Through Georgia" and "Tenting On the Old Camp Ground" were just a few of the numbers they sang. M. S. Barry, 85, of Milton; H. S. Faunce, 83, Randolph; Charles L. Robinson, 85, Melrose, and William R. Dempsey, 95, Melrose, are shown. (Staff photo.)

BOSTON NURSE SECRET BRIDE

Stealing a march on their friends Miss Mary Heaney, City Hospital nurse, and James E. O'Neil of the U. S. customs special duty squad today were enroute to New York on a belated honeymoon.

The couple revealed they were married Nov. 29 at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, but kept their secret until both could get shoreleave from work together.

Following the ceremony, O'Neil returned home to 5 Waldorf st, Dorchester, and Miss Healey divided her time between the nurses' home and the home of her parents at 291 Union st., Weymouth.

It was learned that the couple will make their home at 252 Union st., Weymouth, when they return from New York.

MISSING WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

Worcester, April 8—Charles J. Marean, son of a wealthy mill-owner, learned today why his attractive young wife and their 11-year-old dduchter Dorise disappeared in Lancaster on March 31.

Today he was served with papers in a divorce suit filed by Mrs. Mabel Greta Marean, who is treasurer of the Moulton Textile Company, with which her husband is also connected.

Earlier in the day attorneys for Mrs. Marean called off the police search for the mother and daughter, telling officers that while they had been scouring the locality for face of them Mrs. Marean had been conferring with her lawyers ding the divorce action.

RESCUE HERO IS THIEF, HE SAYS

A hero of six rescues branded himself a thief today in municipal court, pleading guilty to three counts of larceny.

He is John T. Johnson, Jr., 23, of 117 Second st., Cambridge, who was honored by a governor and three mayors and won two medals from the Massachusetts Humane Society for rescue work.

Arrested at his home by Special Officers William L. Tooher and Hyzen A. Chalmers of the Hanover st. station and Sergt. Patrick J. McCarthy of the Cambridge police, he admitted ownership of chickens, eggs and produce that was stolen from the market district.

The chickens were the property of Wilson & Co., Blackstone st., and the eggs belonged to John B. Adams of 17 North Market st.

The other count listed 36 pints of strawberries, 200 oranges and 10 pounds of celery from persons unknown.

WOMAN LEAVES $70,000 WILL

Bequests totaling $70,000 are made in the will of Anne W. L. Cicero of Brookline, formerly of Rome, which was filed for probate at Dedham today. Several of the legacies go to friends in Italy.

Henry Morrow, a cousin, is left $10,000; Oliver B. Harley, a friend, $10,000; Mary Herrick and Matrica Whitman, nieces, $7000 each; Samuel T. Langley, nephew, $6000; Frances Sparkhawk a friend, $6000.

The only public bequest is $1000 to the M. S. P. C. C. The residue of the estate, the value of which is not estimated, is left to the nephew and nieces. The Old Colony Trust Co. is named executor.

POLICE AGE SIX YEARS IN ONE

Police Commissioner Hultman's annual statistical survey of the personnel of the department, completed today, shows that the average age of the city's policemen this year is 45.13 years as against last year's figure of 37.83.

The youngest of the city's 747 guardians of the law would seem to be concentrated at station 5. There the average age is 35.

Capt. James Watkins, in charge of personnel in the commissioner's office, has under him the department's ranking collection of old fogies. The veterans under Capt. Watkins average 58½ years.

TODAY'S TRUE STORY

WHERE THERE'S A WILL

Ridicule Is Fatal

INSPECTOR TENNANT was mad. He was more than mad; he was near the boiling point.

"Listen," he said to the dozen detectives grouped around his desk:

"If you men can't jug Florio maybe I'll get somebody who can. He's got to be jailed or run out of this district. I don't care which. But the man who gets him will be made a lieutenant just as soon as he makes it stick in court. And if you don't get him the whole gang of you may be back to pounding a beat in harness."

There were feeble responses of "Yes, Inspector," "We'll nail him, Inspector," and the conference broke up. Outside the inspector's office Morton voiced the prevailing opinion.

"It's all right for him to sit in there and talk about gettin' Florio, but how you gonna do it? You can't trace anything to him, and even if you do somebody else steps up and takes the rap. And he's got the best lawyers in town to spring him if you do jug him. That baby'll never serve any time and the inspector's talkin' through his hat. Still, I'd like to do it. A lieutenant's pay would just about suit me."

Tom Fisherty had decided that, too. A man could marry on a lieutenant's pay, especially if he had the girl all picked out and she was just waiting to be asked, pay or no pay.

Florio was a big shot and he was making fools of the police. They knew that he had his finger in almost every bottle of whiskey that came into his territory, that he controlled the dope and gambling rackets and that more than one man had died in disputing that control.

But a stop couldn't reach him, he was too well protected for that. Inspector Tennant, incensed at the spread of crime in his district since Florio had risen to power, had even decided to jail him by the strangest laws. Florio was without any means of support, any visible means. But he had easily beaten that in court.

What did he do for a living? Why, he was a restaurant owner. And his attorney had produced a license for a greasy little one-arm lunchroom. It gave Florio's name as the owner. That was a laugh, of course, but blindfolded justice had to be satisfied.

The next few days still found Detective Tom Fisherty thinking and thinking hard. How he would like to land Florio for murder, or dope peddling. But it couldn't be done. But it had to be done. There must be some way. Every man had his weak spot.

Vanity, now that was Florio's. He was as vain as a prize beauty. He showed it in his loud clothes, his swaggering walk, his automobile that was a palace on wheels.

Riding would kill him. But how?

And then Tom Fisherty, thinking until he thought he couldn't think any more, suddenly remembered. He remembered something that he had read long ago in the list of a thousand and one ordinances made and provided for the peace, comfort and security of the city, ordinances which had been taught to him when he was a rookie cop and which, for the most part, he promptly forgot.

When he remembered he acted and the very next day Florio swaggered into a Magistrate's court and paid a fine. He pested the bill from a huge roll and flipped it on the clerk's desk. His contempt for the court and the trifling charge which had brought him in was plain. Tom Fisherty was the prosecuting witness.

Two weeks went by and again Florio swaggered into court, to hear a charge read, to plead guilty and pay another fine, this time $25. Once more he produced his roll of bills and once more Tom Fisherty watched him swagger out again, followed by his string of satellites.

A month went by before Florio came into court the third time. Once more he pleaded guilty and produced his roll of bills.

"Your plea is guilty?" asked the magistrate. "You don't want to stand trial?"

"Naw," said Florio. "I'm guilty, all right. What's the damage? He thumbed the bills in his hand.

"Put away your money," said the Magistrate. "This is your third offense and the powers of the Court is a year in jail."

It took about 20 minutes for Florio's battery of high-priced lawyers to swing into action. But they couldn't do a thing. The "big shot" had pleaded guilty, and he was guilty and all their attempts to appeal were denied.

Florio went to jail and he served his year—every day of it. It finished him, too, because the public laughed at him and his own followers laughed.

Tom Fisherty got his lieutenancy and his higher pay and Eileen didn't say no.

What did they jail Florio for? Why, because Tom Fisherty just happened to remember that the grandstand had sworn in court he was the owner of a lunchroom where Tom didn't have a bit of trouble finding three violations of the sanitary laws which forbid allowing milk cans to stand uncovered and holds the owner responsible.

Florio failed for selling bum milk—that was the laugh that finished him.

What Are Spring Dreams Made Of? -:- -:-

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley

WHAT ARE maiden dreams in the Spring made of? Right off you'd answer, of LOVE, of course. They are supposed to be always of Love; flocks of Cupids smiling chubbily, rosily, through them. The flutter of cherub wings is supposed always to flutter through them. Perhaps they are—any other time of the year but this. But not in the Spring.

Maybe the young man's fancy turns—you know where! But in a girl's Spring slumbers Cupid is dethroned—crowded out—hose out of joint—and all that and in his place floats HATS. H-A-T-S!

Hats flit airily and entrancingly through Mimi's shut-eye hours. All kinds of hats—for this year they are specially seductive Turbans, tricorns, a new dodge in berets, caps, shepherdess pads, nose-veiled, up-and-down hats

Pretty little hats like will-o'-the-wisps, taking Love's place in a young maid's dreams around Easter week.

IF YOUR soil needs lime, this is a good time of year to scatter enough of the slaked lime to whiten the ground and work it in lightly with a rake. In rock gardens, limestone chips are better than the slaked lime for permanent results.

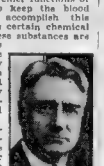
Acidosis Gives Warning of Disease

By DR. COPELAND.

ONE OF the chief functions of the body is to keep the blood alkaline. To accomplish this nature provides certain chemical substances. These substances are sometimes called "alkaline buffers." They may be thrown into the blood stream at any time to neutralize acids formed by the body.

When excessive acid production is the rule, the buffer substances are exhausted. We then have the condition spoken of as "acidosis," or "acid intoxication."



Dr. Copeland

A person suffering with acidosis complains of difficulty in breathing. This is frequently called air hunger because of the difficulty in getting sufficient air.

The breath has a sweet, fruity smell. Urinalysis shows an excess of certain chemicals.

Acidosis is not a disease. It is merely a sign or symptom of disease. It may occur in many diseases.

Starvation may result in acidosis. This condition was frequently seen in Europe during the World War.

The acidosis seen in diabetics is a serious condition. In this disease the fats and carbonhydrates are not properly used by the body. The formation of excessive amounts of acid in this condition may lead to coma, or loss of consciousness. Coma is a condition demanding immediate medical attention.

Acidosis is found in certain heart and kidney conditions. The acidosis in these conditions is usually due to an inability of the kidney to dispose of acids.

In all cases of acidosis or acid intoxication the treatment is essentially the treatment of the underlying cause. These persons must be properly fed.

Make-Believe

By FAITH BALDWIN

interrupting herself now and then with commands or comments to Koenig.

She had rehearsed her story time and time again. And now that she was forced to give a performance to this particularly important audience, she found herself doing it creditably. She told him that she had moved away from London, told him of the deaths, in an epidemic, of the "cousins" and of her permanent estrangement from her "mother." All this he accepted as perfectly reasonable. It all hung together. And as he tacitly understood that she had believed him dead, and was determined not to speak of that particular phase of the situation, a stranger, overhearing their conversation, would have believed them old friends, separated by circumstances and reunited by chance.

"So," said Mary Lou, on a long breath of relief, "when I couldn't find anything to do I came over here, hoping to find some relatives of my—my father's. I had an opportunity to sail with an elderly American woman, a Mrs. Duncan, who paid my passage over. And I hadn't been here very long before I saw your mother's name in the paper and came out to see her, on a chance that it might be—"

She stopped and flushed. She had been speaking gravely, a little breathlessly. It wasn't hard to think herself into the part; she had dreamed so long, had for so many years dramatized herself as the heroine of every book she read and every play she saw. And her sobriety lent a semblance of truth to her halting explanation.

"And it was," commented Lorrimer, as soberly as she. "A very wonderful chance," he added, "for me."

His deep, toneless voice took on faint vibrancy and color. Mary Lou, the flush deepening, whirled to Koenig, who was off at some distance, gayly chasing a harmless and chattering squirrel up a tree. It was going to be difficult to ignore the personal equation, after all.

They had just passed the stables. Mary Lou cried out, in snatching at any conversational straw:

"I called on your horses this morning. What beauties they are! I wish," she said truly and wistfully, "that I knew how to ride."

"Don't you?"

He bent his tall head and looked at her in some astonishment, and realized, with a pang of amazement, that he knew very little about her, after all. For all his dreaming and despair, his actual knowledge of her was so incomplete. Yet he had remembered trivial, small things and, because he remembered, suddenly asked, half whimsically:

"Do you still adore artichokes, Delight?"

She started a little. It was to be some time before she could become accustomed to that exotic name.

Well, she did like them!

"Of course," said Mary Lou and smiled. "However, did you remember?"

"I remember a lot," he said somberly and then, because he saw her wince a little, added, hastily, "If you'd really like to learn to ride, I'll teach you."

She looked at him with her eyes like dark stars. This was the sort of thing she had made up her mind to work for in order to give him some healthy interest, to take him out of himself.

"Would you really? Are you—strong enough?" she said.

Inspired question! He began to see himself as he must seem to a healthy, normal girl—not "strong" enough, a semi-invalid! Not a pretty picture. He shrugged the broad, stooped shoulders that, from very pride, he was already holding straighter.

"I'm all right," he answered. "Don't worry about me."

They were approaching the house now and Margaret Lorrimer, a loose tweed coat over her frock, was coming down the steps to meet them. She had been very anxious over the result of this first encounter, this initial step in the carefully laid plans. She greeted them easily enough but her eyes sought Mary Lou's with a clear enough inquiry in their brown depths. Mary Lou nodded, imperceptibly, and smiled, and Mrs. Lorrimer drew a long breath of relief.

Lorrimer was questioning his mother with more animation than she had seen in him for years.

"About the horses—Delight wants to ride. I've said I'll teach her—if I haven't forgotten myself," he added, half resentfully. "Have we any mount suitable—something pretty tame to begin with?" he went on and, at Mary Lou's indignant exclamation, he started himself by laughing. Pretty rusty, that laugh, but it served.

"Flapper," his mother said thoughtfully, adeptly concealing her own pleasure and astonishment—"I think she'd do—"

"Flapper? Is that the little brown one?" Mary Lou asked. "Well, she doesn't sound awfully tame!"

Tomorrow—Mary Lou plans to ride with Lorry on one of his horses.

Wife's Mother Interferes, He Says

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'd like to know for my own satisfaction how much I'm expected to stand from my wife's folks? We've been married less than a year and Sunday is just about the only day we have together, as I work very long hours during the week, in the hope of getting my pay raised. Well, just as sure as Sunday comes around, my mother-in-law phones my wife that some of her relations are coming in for a big Sunday dinner, and for my wife to hurry over and help. Of course, they ask me to eat their dinner, but I don't want it. I want my own dinner, and my own wife on the one day of the week when we can be together. In my place, what would you do about it?
RAVING HUSBAND

Dear Husband—I'd rave, too, but at the same time I'd do something more constructive than raving—I'd courteously protest. Write your mother-in-law a polite letter (be sure it is polite, don't start any family feuds) and say you feel you'd like to have your wife's company one day in the week, and won't she please excuse her from the weekly family gatherings. I don't believe the lady means to be unkind, or possessive; she's used to having her daughter at these Sunday affairs and doesn't realize the girl now has a home of her own.

Here's that flavor you demand

In these Boston Style Beans baked by Heinz

Yes, indeed! That real, old-time New England flavor you like so well. Choice little pea beans . . . plenty of pork . . . plenty of that special molasses . . . and plenty of oven-baking. That's how Heinz gets this flavor for you.

Convenient, too. Just heat and serve. Why go to all the bother of home-made beans when those made by Heinz are so similar, so very good. Order from your grocer.

Twelve Magic Beans; Recipe for Success

Gives Simple Way to Attain Leadership in Selling Merchandise

— By B. C. FORBES —

New York, April 8— If you are not interested in attaining success don't read today's column. It is all about 12 magic beans—but it isn't a fairy story. It is the simplest, least costly success recipe you have ever heard.

Very appropriately, it deals primarily with selling.

After all, isn't the world's main economic trouble today the lack of sufficient buying and selling to keep everybody reasonably busy? The world's best business and financial brains have sadly tried to devise a cure. Just as in War no Napoleonic genius emerged capable of solving the problem of how to break the long-continued deadlock, so no business genius has come forward with any effective plan to overcome the economic stalemate in this country and throughout the world.

B. C. Forbes

Is it that in the modern world things are now done on such a colossal scale that, when something goes wrong, there is no brain big enough to originate a remedy?

Our 12 magic beans won't cure the ills of the business world. But, make a success of any business, they may at least turn many salesmen into successes, fatten the order books of many concerns, set additional machinery in motion and—who knows?—pry business off its dead center.

Jack Klein, successful sales manager, h.s sent to his sales force throughout the country a little booklet labeled The 12 Magic Success Beans." In an accompanying letter he says to each salesman:

"I can see you laughing when you receive them. Go ahead, have a good, hearty laugh. Now look again. What do you see? Twelve little beans? Listen to this story:

"I have a man—a wealthy man —who made all his money as a salesman. When approached with the question: 'To what do you owe your success as a salesman?' He reached into his vest pocket, and what do you think he pulled out? A handful of what looked like ordinary kidney beans!

"'I owe my success to those Twelve Magic Beans,' he said simply.

"'What do you mean?' I asked. 'You surely don't believe that carrying those beans around in your pocket brings you good luck?'

"He replied: 'When I carry them in the left hand vest pocket they are just ordinary kidney beans. But when I carry them in my right hand vest pocket, they are worth their weight in gold many times over.' (By this time I just knew he was cuckoo.)

"Without appearing to notice my look of pity, he continued: 'When I start out in the morning I place these twelve ordinary kidney beans in my left hand vest pocket. Then I walk and talk, until I make my first full sales presentation. Then I take one of the beans from my left-hand pocket and place it in my right-hand vest pocket. All through the day each time I make a complete sales presentation, whether I sell Mr. Prospect or not, I transfer one bean from the left to the right pocket.

"'For years I have been doing this, and these twelve full sales each day have made me independently wealthy. Is it any wonder that I attribute the 'Twelve Magic Success Beans'?"

"Tomorrow morning I want you to take the little box and place it in your left vest pocket. They will still be common kidney beans if they stay in your left pocket—but if you are as wise as I think you are they will not long remain common kidney beans.

"They await only your magic touch to transform them into magic success beans!

"With every full talk you are entitled to transfer one bean from the left to the right pocket. Do this tomorrow, the day after and the day after that. Twelve success beans in the right pocket means you have done a day's work. When you have done this, you have done everything—anything less and you have fallen short of your opportunity and—like as not—short of success.

"The beans await only your magic touch to transform them into pure gold with your magic touch.

NEW BANK PAYS DIVIDEND IN FIRST YEAR

By FRANK H. MELOON

Among the newer bank presidents of New York who began their active careers in Boston is President Medley G. B. Whelpley of the American Express Bank & Trust Co. Mr. Whelpley's regime has evidently been attended by signal success, since directors have this week authorized the initial dividend of a dollar a share payable after the bank's organization.

M. G. B. Whelpley

Mr. Whelpley's bank began business April 15, 1930, with a paid-in capital stock of $1,000,000 and a surplus of $5,000,000. The latest report of conditions, as of March 25, showed total resources of $54,000,000 and deposits of $25,300,000.

Chairman Francis H. Brownell of American Smelting & Refining Co., which is currently earning better than the dividend on its preferred stock, thinks the current quotation of 94½ cents a pound for copper below the cost of production. It is not the lowest reached in recent months. He thinks there will be further copper curtailment.

* * *

Mr. Brownell states American Smelting has about $21,000,000 in cash and government securities, sufficient to pay common dividends, which amount to $7,500,000 a year, for almost three years.

With copper at 9½ cents a pound Anaconda is earning at the rate of between $13,500,000 and $14,000,000 a year, after bond interest and taxes, but before depreciation. This is a bit in excess of the present annual dividend rate of $1.50 a share.

Some of the Boston Elevated issues have been making new and highs last week, and the trend may be far failed to find stockholders who are willing to subscribe to any reduction in dividend rentals. These is considerable State St. sentiment in favor of continuation of public control as provided for in the "L" contract act as it now stands. Control now ensures automatically in case the Legislature follows past precedent by doing nothing.

A series of industrial explosions involving chemicals has led to inquiry, and property, during the last two years in Greater Boston, industrial Engineering Society Council to devote the April meeting of the Engineering Section to the general subject, "Hazards in the Manufacture, Storage, Use and Handling of Acids and Chemicals Used in Industrial Plants." This dinner meeting will be held in the Boston Memorial Building tomorrow. W. S. Topping, Bureau of Explosives, New York City, and Frank J. Curtis, Merrimac Chemical Company, Boston, are the speakers.

Deposits of reporting banks in New York City are now at the highest point ever attained by these banks at this time of year. That should dispose of the impression in some quarters that these banks have suffered serious contraction in deposits in recent weeks as the Boston News Bureau says editorially today

Fox Is Sold With Dividend Doubted

Wall St. gold on the theory that the new banker members of the Fox board would stop dividend payments as the first step in unraveling out the financial problems of the company. A $5,000,000 note issue is due next week.

Railroad Stocks Under Pressure

While Fox was being sold in big volume today, railroad stocks were also under pressure. New York Central dropped off fractionally to a new low for the year. Union Pacific lost over 3 points. Atchison, Canadian Pacific, Erie and Baltimore & Ohio all sold lower. The weekly car loadings report showed a moderate drop of 1800 cars from the preceding week.

Tobacco Issues Are Put Higher

United Cigar Stores Co. and Schulte Retail Stores, both of which advance prices on popular cigarettes Friday from present level of 13 cents, two for 27 cents. Most cigarette retailers, including chain stores, are expected to follow suit. The former price has prevailed for two years, and has been unprofitable.

James' Holdings in Northern Intact

Great Northern Railway explains stock holdings in road of Arthur Curtiss James remain intact, reason for his holdings not being listed with 20 largest holders as of close of 1930 being that he had deposited them with committee attempting to bring about merger of Northern Pacific and Great Northern. He had only certificates of deposit at close of year. Holdings of George F. Baker, Jr., second largest holder on April 30, 1930, are accounted for in same way. James on April 30, 1930, held through Curtiss Southwestern Co., 52,850 Great Northern shares, which would place him at head of list.

Great Western's Profit Sets Peak

V. V. Boatner, president of Chicago Great Western Railroad Company, told stockholders at annual meeting today that quarter net for this year would exceed that of same period in 1930, as well as that of first quarter since the end of federal control.

It is understood that earnings will be shown as equal to $8.80 per share, compared with earlier estimates approximating $9.50. Most interesting phase of this report, however, will be disclosure whether "non-recurring" items contributed substantially to the earnings.

Important Selling in Packing Shown

Although California Packing rallied a slight fraction, it was evident that considerable nervousness still exists over its $4 dividend. The selling which this week forced the stock to a new low for the year today confirms disclosure here some months ago of important liquidation

STOCKS HIGHER IN LIGHT WALL ST. TRADING

New York, April 8—Stock prices in Wall St. today scored a moderate upturn, the first this week, and the fourth in 15 trading sessions.

Net gains of 1 to 5 points or more were numerous at the finish, although the advance had been of a wavering sort, experiencing two important interruptions during the course of the day.

BEARS IN RETREAT

Trading continued in light volume, teh day's transfers exceeding 2,000,000 shares by a small margin.

The advance appeared to represent primarily retreat by the bears, who found their position becoming uncomfortably crowded. Midwest business statistics were less gloomy than expected. Unsettling rumors concerning price cuts in other units in steel and sulphur were denied. The Brazilian bonds recovered a little.

Issues closing 2 to 3 points higher included American Can, American Telephone, American Smelting, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Consolidated Gas, Cass, Du Pont, Electric Autolite, Westinghouse, California Packing, Johns Manville, Eastman and Worthington.

AUBURN UP OVER 30

Among the closely held issues, Auburn was pushed up more than 30 points to above 330, and Mc-Kessport more than 6 across the 100 mark.

Soft spots were Texas Gulf, Fox, Julius Kayser and Homestake Mining, off 2 to 3. Union Pacific recovered after dropping into new low ground.

Weekly street trade reviews reported the expected slowing up of ingot output, Iron Age placing production at 53 per cent of capacity, against 57 a fortnight ago. While no major upturn seems to be in prospect before the seasonal impulse is felt in August, the reviews indicate the situation is too mixed to show a conclusive trend, and suggest that uncertainty over price schedules may have imposed a damper for the moment.

Weekly report of freight car loadings show the small decline of 1863 cars from the previous week, but it was notable that miscellaneous freight and less than car load lots, the more important items of industrial activity in this tabulation, were higher than in the preceding week.

Electric Power productions last week showed about a normal seasonal decline from the previous week, and was 1 6-10 per cent under the like week of 1930, against a decline of 1¼ per cent from 1930 in the previous week.

Call money was back on a 1½ per cent basis.

The First Marathon — Victor Immortalized in Bronze and Song

Patriots' Day Run Here Blue Ribbon Race

Unforeseeing one! Yes, he fought on the Marathon day;
So when Persia was dust, all cried, "To Akropolis!
Run Pheidippedes, one race more! The meed is thy due
'Athens is saved, thank Pan' go shout!" He flung down his shield,
Ran like the fire once more; and the space 'twixt the Fennel-field
And Athens was stubble again, a field which a fire ran through,
'Till in he broke. "Rejoice, we conquer!" Lake some throush the clay
Joy in his blood bursting his heart, he died—the bliss!.

So to this day, when friend meets friend, the word of salute
So is Pheidippedes happy forever—the noble strong man
Who could race like a god, bear the face of a god, whom a god loved so well,
He saw the land saved he had helped to save, and was suffered to tell
Such tidings, yet never decline, but, gloriously as he begun
So to the end gloriously—once to shout, thereafter be mute,
"Athens is saved!"—Pheidippedes dies in the shout of his meed.

DE MAR

YOU don't hear much of Pheidippedes now. Any schoolboy will tell you of Clarence De Mar and what a great Marathon runner he is, and how the veteran is likely to win the annual Patriots' Day Marathon of the Boston A. A., one week from next Monday. Dad will tell you of little Johnny Hayes, who won the Olympic Marathon at London in 1908, and even of Tom Hicks of the Cambridgeport Gym who led the field home over the long, grueling trail through the blistering Missouri cornfields in the Olympic Marathon at St. Louis in 1904. Maybe if Dad is in the mood he will tell you of Dorando Pietri and sing you the song they wrote about him, the chorus of which went:

"Dorando, he run aroun' she ring,
Once, twice, like anything.
I cry, 'Dorando, don't you stop!'
Justa then, Dorando he flop—
Gooda bye the old barber shop—
Dorando, gooda for not!"

YES, all of you have heard of Johnny Hayes, of Dorando, of Tom Longboat the speedy son of the Onondagas; of Alfie Shrubb of England, Henri St. Yves of France, Gusta Ljungstrum and Thure Johansen of Sweden, Jim Crowley, the bad carrier, and all the rest of the great Marathoners of the days when the Marathon craze was at its height. For two decades the annual Patriots' Day Marathon has been run from Ashland or Hopkinton into the heart of Boston, and many of you can name each year a winner.

But Pheidippedes, who was that guy, anyway?

Pheidippedes will be remembered when Hayes, De Mar and all our modern Marathoners are forgotten. Pheidippedes has been immortalized in poem and sculpture and will live forever.

Pheidippedes, who Browning sings about in the verse atop the column, was the original Marathon runner. He was "the noble strong man," who raced from the plains of Marathon, where the Greeks under Miltiades had defeated Xerxes and his Persian hosts, to Athens with the news of the great victory.

A reproduction of the original statue of Pheidippedes by the great Phidias was the prize awarded the victor in the Olympic Marathon in the first modern Olympic games at Athens in 1896, and replicas have been presented to the winners of every Olympic Marathon since.

THE SCULPTOR catches Pheidippedes in his glorious tragic end, the finish of the "race," when gasping, "Rejoice, Athens is saved!" he falls dying to the ground, holding aloft the sacred fennel, given him by the god. Pan as a sacred pledge that, his feat performed, the gods would reward him. Little did Pheidippedes, as Browning sings, with his plans to "Marry a certain maid I know keeps faith to the brave—

He to my house and home; and when my children shall creep
Close to my knee—recount how the god was awful yet kind, Promised their sire reward the full . . ."

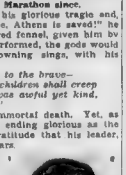
think that his boon from the gods would be immortal death. Yet, as the gods promised, Pheidippedes was given an ending glorious as the beginning and was spared the barbs of ingratitude that his leader, Miltiades, was pierced with in his declining years.

Marathon is the Greek word for fennel, which covered the plains in which the Battle of Marathon was fought.

The distance from th: little stone house on the fields of Marathon to Athens is 26 miles, 385 yards. That is the official Marathon distance raced today.



HAYES, TODAY

THE MARATHON race is the blue ribbon event of the Olympic Games. Nations would give more to have their flag carried to victory in the Marathon than in any other event. That is as it should be. No race is so shrouded in antiquity or has such classic significance.

Outside of the Olympic Marathons no other Marathon carries quite the significance as does the annual Patriots' Day Marathon here in the Athens of America.

NO MARATHON except the Olympic races over attract such a banner entry as does our Boston race. In name or not, it is the annual American Marathon championship. Down will gather along the streets over which the Boston A. A. Marathon of 1931 will be run one week from next Monday virtually will witness a replica of an Olympic Marathon.

The Golden Age of the modern Marathoner was in the two years following the sensational race between little Johnny Hayes of the United States and Dorando Pietri of Italy in the London Olympic Marathon of 1908.

Hayes and Dorando fought it out over the long, blistering trail from Windsor Castle to Shepherd Bush. The Italian collapsed just as he entered the stadium at Shepherd's Bush. Three times he fell to the ground.

Each time Dorando was assisted to his feet by the English officials. He crossed the finish line, a few feet ahead of Hayes, with one official holding him up on one side and one on the other. He figuratively was carried across the line by the English officials, whose slogan seemed to be, "Anything to beat the Americans."

LONGBOAT

That was in violation of all rules. Dorando could not have finished the race unassisted. The Americans protested the victory and the Olympic committee rightfully disqualified Dorando and awarded first place to Hayes, the American, first to cross the line unassisted.

THE dramatic finish of the London Olympic Marathon of 1908 and the accompanying incidents stirred the American public to a pitch of feeling bordering on hysteria. Just as the White Hope epidemic seized the land after Jack Johnson's defeat by Jeffries, so did America go Marathon crazy after the Hayes-Dorando duel in 1908.

Little Johnny Hayes now is prominent in New Jersey business and politics. He directed the big Marathon along Hudson County boulevards, New Jersey, last Sunday, the winner of which, Albert Michelson, of the Millrose A. A., will start in the big Boston Marathon here on April 20.

Dorando Pietri is alive and runs a bakeshop in Sharkai, Italy. Over the door is a sign on which is printed in Italian, "Fato Pede."

"Fato Pede" in English is, "Made by the feet."

It is a nice polite Italian way of telling the populace that the money Dorando established his bakeshop with was gained by running professional Marathons.

Spirit of Irish Star Was Akin to That of Great Teacher

This is the sixth instalment of the thrilling and impressive life story of Knute Rockne, the world's most famous football coach, who was killed in an airplane crash. It is written by Warren Brown, noted sports writer of the Chicago Herald-Examiner and lifelong personal friend of Rockne. Mr. Brown's interesting narrative will continue daily until he has unfolded his brilliant portrayal of Rockne and his achievements.

CHAPTER 6
By WARREN BROWN

Copyright 1931 Chicago Herald and Examiner. Reprinted by Universal service.

No attempt to set down in writing the story of Knute Rockne can hope to be at all comprehensive without inclusion of a mass of detail about the career of George Gipp at Notre Dame.

And if, for a while, this narrative seems to digress, with more of Gipp than of Rockne, the digression is defensible. Rockne himself would have had it so.

This is illustrated aptly by Roger Kiley, who was an end on the teams of Gipp's time.

"We were returning from a game with Army," Kiley says, "and Gipp happened to drop into a seat opposite me, and began talking. He sat there for a long time. What he talked about I'm afraid I don't know.

"All the time, I felt like pinching myself. Gipp was talking to me! The great Gipp. I know that I wrote home to my folks, as soon as possible, telling them about the incident.

"Understand, that I had been on the squad for two years. That was my reaction. I don't think the reaction of the other boys was much different.

"We knew that if any of us went to Gipp, he would do anything we wanted. But we just couldn't go to him for nerve, I guess.

Gipp Leader

On the field, Gipp was the leader.

Kiley went on the regular team, following the departure of Bernie Kirk. In the first game he played, Kiley was thrown a pass by Gipp, and dropped it.

"I felt then," said Kiley, "that I had obtained the chance for which I had been praying—and then spoiled it all.

"When we started to line up again, Gipp came over and stopped me.

"'Nervous' he said.

"I didn't have to tell him that I was.

"'I'm going to throw you another pass,' Gipp said. 'It's going to be a soft one. You can't miss it, if you try.'

Gipp threw the pass Kiley caught it. Others were thrown, and Kiley caught them.

"After the game," Kiley continues, "Gipp stopped me, as we were leaving the field.

"'You're a great pass receiver,' he said. I knew darn well that I wasn't, but there it was. Gipp said it.

"Come out a little ahead of regular practice, for a while,' he said, 'and we'll go through some more of this stuff. We'll pass some of those teams blind, before we get through with them.'"

Fumbling Hurt

That was one phrase of Gipp.

There is another, not entirely unlike this, that has to do with the success of Chet Wynne, whose final rush through to recognition was made only after a struggle that must have disheartened any less courageous lad.

Wynne's early football experience was marred by fumbling. He was a great defensive back, one of the greatest in Notre Dame's history. He had all the equipment for a great offensive back, but the fumbles recurred with damning regularity.

Rockne appeared to lose patience with him.

Chet drifted back until he was almost lost in the shuffling of a third or fourth string group.

Gipp always insisted that Wynne had possibilities, and Rockne, unquestionably knew that, but went about his own method of letting Chet know what a horrible thing a fumble was.

He used to drop by the group to which Wynn was sentenced, make some remark about the fumblers, and pass on.

Earl Walsh, the regular fullback was hurt prior to the Nebraska game, and, the story goes, Gipp made a plea that Wynne be taken along.

'Dead Man's Play'

That much decided, Gipp sought out Wynne, advised him to tuck a football under his arm and carry it around all day, if necessary, to get used to hanging on to it.

Whether this be true, or whether it was the Gipp influence, or another exposition of the psychological urge of Rockne, the fact remains that Wynne rose to greatness in that Nebraska game.

It was in the Gipp era that the "dead man's play" put in an appearance, and Gipp figured in it very prominently.

Joe Brandy, quarterback, had faked a run against Nebraska, and as he lay writhing on the ground, the whole Notre Dame team got onside.

Gipp stood back a little, and called to Brandy:

"Are you hurt badly, Joe?"

At the name "Joe," Brandy flipped the ball back to Gipp, who was off like a shot, and past the startled Cornhuskers for a touchdown, before realization came to them that the Irish episode was

Max, Strib to Fight in Cleveland

Chicago, April 8 (INS)—The Max Schmeling-Young Stribling championship fight is lost to Chicago. It will be staged in Cleveland in the new Municipal Stadium on July 3.

Official announcement of this will come a week from today in South Bend, where William F. Carey, president of the Madison Square Garden Corporation, will meet with Sheldon Clark and a group of Chicago newspapermen.

Inability on the part of Carey and his Madison Square Garden Corporation of Illinois to adjust matters fitting to the staging of the title bout here, caused the shift to Cleveland.

The failure to get a 15-round law here, the threat of the Chicago Stadium Corporation to seek an injunction against the fight, the refusal of the Illinois Athletic Commission to allow the New York Milk Fund Show to share in the profits and the hostile attitude of certain individuals together with the high rental asked by the South Park board, all figured in the shift.

It is understood that the city administration of Cleveland literally turned the city over to Carey and his aids and that every co-operation will be given the New York crowd in the promotion of the title battle.

Carey visited the Cleveland site last week. He was met by a delegation of Cleveland politicians whose inducements were so strong that Carey could not resist.

He is greatly impressed with the conditions for staging the battle in Cleveland. The new arena, which is to be used as the Cleveland baseball park, will seat 130,000 when completed, and is built to handle fights as well as baseball.

Boxing is legalized in Cleveland. The city is midway between Chicago and New York, and Carey believes it will draw big from both cities.

Bowdoin Track Star Declared Ineligible

Brunswick, Me., April 8 (AP)—Bowdoin College track hopes received a decided set-back today with the announcement that Sid Foster, star 202 and 440-yard dash man, and two other members of the track team, were ineligible because of scholastic difficulties.

Dempsey 'Too Old to Box Now'

Pittsburgh, April 8 (AP)—When Jack Dempsey has had a good long rest, he is going to return to the refereeing and promotion end of the fight game—if he finds it won't ruin his health.

The former heavyweight champion, with a tired, drawn look about him, spent an hour waiting for a Chicago train in the Pennsylvania station here early today after a 67-mile taxi ride, over detours and wrong roads, from Wheeling, W. Va., where he was the third man in a ring last night.

Dempsey said he would never fight again.

"I'm too old to stand the gaff," he added.

He will go to Chicago and then maybe travel on westward.

INDIANS WANT NEW OFFICIALS FOR FINAL TILT

BRUIN CUBS DEFEATED, 3 TO 2

By BILL GRIMES

Despite the fact that in the opinion of every unbiased fan, Bill Stewart and Frank Synnott have been almost above criticism during the Fontaine Cup series, Coach Frank Carroll of the Indians attempted to bring pressure to bear on President Dooley of the Canadian-American League to have National Hockey League officials appointed for the seventh game, which will be played in Springfield tomorrow night.

For some unknown reason, President Dooley gave his permission for Col. Hammond of the New York Rangers, who is interested in the Indians, to address the referees before last night's game at the Garden. Hammond did not attempt to advise the officials as to the rules but dwelt upon the effects of a capacity crowd on the usual run of referees.

As soon as the demand was made for N. H. L. officials to handle the seventh game, President Dooley put his foot down and declared that the work of Stewart and Synnott was better than any the big league referees had shown him this season.

When the officials discovered that their work was not meeting with the approval of Frank Carroll, they put their oars in the argument and declared that they were underpaid, for the work and strain they have been under during the five games they have officiated.

Any official, who is assigned to a championship series, should be paid a worthwhile fee. With a championship at stake, an official who pulls a "bone," is doomed. A major error may cost an official his reputation, for it is impossible to live down a mistake made during the title series.

Indians Pleased as Long as They Win

After the Springfield 3 to 2 victory over the Bruin Cubs last night at the Garden, the Indians offered no complaint as to the officiating, but had they been on the losing end the usual squawk would have gone up.

Frank Carroll burst into print in a Springfield paper this week denouncing the officiating of Stewart and Synnott during the fourth game of the Fontaine Cup series. It is a tough situation when the officials are publicly criticized by the manager of a club which was beaten by four goals. Such a protest has too much of an alibi to carry any weight.

Until such a time as the referees receive the same protection and support as is tendered baseball umpires, hockey is in danger. Practically every game is won or lost by the officiates.

Few teams have ever admitted that they were fairly and squarely beaten and that the refereeing had nothing to do with their downfall. Of course, there have been cases where poor officiating have been responsible for defeats, but usually the real cause can be traced to a mistake on the part of some player.

Seventh Game Tomorrow Night

The Cubs and the Indians will play the seventh game of their long drawn out series tomorrow night in Springfield. Judging from the playing of the clubs last night, the Indians have the edge on the Cubs.

The Springfield club is fortified with three forward lines, while the Cubs have been forced to rely on only two. The first Cub line appeared to be shot last night. They were slow and failed to take advantage of many opportunities which they would have converted into goals were they at the top of their form.

Yank Boyd, Eddie Burke and Dead Kinch have been carrying the offensive load for the Cubs for weeks. They were at their best at the start of the series but they appeared stale last night. With only a day's lay-off, it is doubtful if they come back on the Cubs today do, the Cubs' chances of winning the Fontaine Cup are poor.

Paul Runge, Bucky Harris and Bob Taylor outshone the first varsity line last night. They displayed plenty of speed and a abundance of pepper, especially after Gene Corrigan's second goal, which was a "bonehead" play, for the puck caromed off Jack Pratt's leg and into the net before Benny Grant was able to stir.

With or loss tomorrow night, the Bruin Cubs are deserving of plenty of credit. They have battled superior clubs through seven of the toughest play-off games in the history of any league.

Columbia, Yale Clash on Diamond

New York, April 7 (AP)—Yale and Columbia were scheduled to open the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League race at Baker Field here today.

As no decision has yet been reached on the drive to put the coach back on the bench, both Andrew Coakley of Columbia and Joe Wood, the Eli mentor, will sit in the stands during the game.

Gipp Displayed Same Fine Spirit as Coach

The results were much more satisfactory.

Army had blocked a kick, early in the game, and recovered for a safety, and the 2-to-0 score was all there was, until the game lacked but a few minutes of completion.

Army had stopped all of Notre Dame but Gipp, and he hadn't proven to be the avalanche into which he developed in later years.

Shared Glory

Gipp checked signals, and asked Capt. Coughlin to call for time out.

"You can't get anywhere with that play," Gipp protested to Brandy, who argued that if Gipp couldn't get anywhere, who could.

"The whole Army will be waiting for me," insisted Gipp. "I've got a play that will score for us. I'll fake that tackle slash, at the right side, and you hang on to the ball and go over left guard."

Though Brandy protested, Gipp had his way. When the ball was snapped, Gipp started off tackle, and practically all the Army, as he had predicted, piled up in front of him.

Brandy, still having the ball, actually walked the four or five yards necessary across the goal line, without an Army man being around to halt him.

Concerning another of Gipp's plays, Nebraska again being the victim, there is a story which hasn't a great deal to do with the subject at hand, but which may as well be related.

There was considerable wagering on the game, and a party from Oklahoma did everything in reaching the game a few minutes after it had started.

Too Fast for Fans

The opening kickoff was taken under the goal posts by Gipp, who handed it to Bergman, the latter racing the length of the field for a touchdown.

The teams lined up for the next kickoff, and it was at this point the Oklahomans arrived.

They had wagered on Notre Dame. They saw the game, as far as anyone could convince them, and as the subsequent scoring developed but seven points for Notre Dame, and nine for Nebraska, it took some convincing before they accepted their winnings.

Downtown, after the game, when the papers proclaimed that Notre Dame had won, 14 to 9, the Oklahomans were still going around, remarking what a strange country it was, that even the newspapers insisted on printing the wrong score of the football game.

Word Was Law

Rockne believed in beef and brawn but he never sacrificed speed for poundage. The famous Four Horsemen of 1926 were not big men.

Rockne's word was law. Disobedience meant banishment, as Charlie Bachman once found. Rockne detected him using a style of his own instead of the quick, spread step and low crouch he had spent weeks in teaching him.

"Get out of the lineup, Bachman," snapped Rockne. "Go to the showers and turn in your uniform. We will not need you any more."

The great coach's ideas on blocking are known to all. He taught his men to use their hips and keep their feet always. He knew a man on the ground was lost to the play.

Rockne knew that frame of mind was as valuable as physical condition. He greatly stressed coolness and mental poise. Losing one game Rockne called the team before him and told them that lack of mental poise was responsible for it. As the boys left the gymnasium they encountered Adolphus, the janitor, who demanded:

"For why you loss the game?"

"Blame it on old man Mental Poise," grinned Harry Mehre, the center. "Only for old man Mental Poise we would have won the game.

STEINKE WANTS BOUT WITH LONDOS

Steinke is one of the best of the foreign grapplers showing in this country. He is a big, powerful fellow and also has a thorough knowledge of the fine points of the mat game.

Dusek has made frequent local appearances. His rough house style appeals to the fans.

There will be two finish bouts on Friday night's card. Dick Daviscourt of California will oppose Matros Kirilenko, the Cossack, while Ray Steele of California will take on George Hagen of Brooklyn.

In 30 minute-matches. Paul Jones will meet Mike Roman, while Karl Vogel will oppose Wee Willie Davis.

Bouts Last Night

COUNT PICKED TO WIN OVER McKAY

Count Zarynoff, one of the most colorful of the heavyweight wrestlers, has been installed a favorite for his finish bout, best two falls out of three, with Pat McKay, Irish champion, which will be staged by Paul Bowser at the Arena tomorrow night.

Zarynoff won from Boris Demetroff at the Arena last week. The Count showed flashy form against Demetroff, and scored a spectacular fall.

McKay says he will upset the dope tomorrow night. Pat has shown to advantage in all of his Boston starts and his admirers are of the opinion he will conquer Zarynoff.

Nick Lutze of South California, one of the most popular wrestlers to ever show in the Hub, will mingle with Jack Wagner of Providence in another finish match on tomorrow night's card. Lutze isn't yet satisfied Ed George is his master, and intends to keep on the trail of the champion.

Al Morelli, Boston College star, will also appear on tomorrow night's card. He will whirl into action against Sam Skoraky of Chelsea. Morelli has developed rapidly and looks like one of the most promising young wrestlers in the country.

John Spellman of Brown will meet Jose Dominguez, Kewpie Kilroy takes on Joe Shimkus, while Billy Carmichael of William and Mary opposes Tony Gust.

Tech Track Star Is Seriously Ill

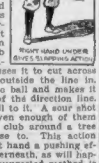
Ben Stevenson, best Tech low hurdler of last year, is seriously ill with scarlet fever and may be lost to the M. I. T. squad for the season.

The first regular meet scheduled for the varsity, M. I. T. runners is with Pennsylvania on April 25. On the same day the freshmen will meet Andover.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

Now suppose we examine what happens with the stroke if the right hand is not suppressed at the outset of the back swing, as suggested here.



The moment you turn from the ball and start back, your right hand will go to work. It will begin to push — often without your knowing it. It is stronger than the left arm and hand. It grips tightly, overcoming the left hand. It then shoves the club somewhat outwardly and causes it to cut across the ball from outside the line in. This makes the ball and makes it go to the left of the direction line. It has much roll to it. A sour shot for a driver. Even enough of them you wrap your club around a tree or have impulse to. This action gives your right hand a pushing effect. Kept underneath, as will happen when the suggested method is used, it slaps. It is an underhand slap—like skipping a flat stone across water. When it slaps it cannot slap too hard in full shots. And there is no difference in method for full shots other than the greater windup.

31 RACE HORSES BURN TO DEATH

Lexington, Ky., April 8 (INS)—Defective wiring was believed to have caused the fire at Anchorage, Ky., last night, in which 22 horses were burned to death. An investigation was launched today to determine the cause of a combined stable fire last night. Nine brood mares, valued at $100,000, were burned to death in this second fire, which swept a trotting horse farm near here owned by John L. Dodge of New York.

Jane Dillon and Hollycrod Pansy, valued at $20,000 each, were among the horses lost in the Dodge fire.

At Anchorage six foals, eight brood mares and eight thoroughbred horses were lost when the W. C. Weant stable was destroyed. The eight racers had been in training at St. Johns Park, Fla., and arrived in Kentucky yesterday. Metaid, Judge Primrose, Lady Clarence, Wig Queen and Stop were among the horses destroyed.

Metaid was eligible for the Kentucky Derby.

Joe Harris Signed by Buffalo Club

Franklin, Pa., April 8 (AP)—Joe Harris, infielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates and outfielder of the Washington Senators, today signed with the Buffalo International league club. He will report tomorrow for training. Harris batted over .300 last season with the Toronto Internationals.

Harvard University is to have a professional golf coach, it was announced today. Burt Nicoll, a well-known pro here, has been named as coach of the varsity and freshman golf teams.

EXTRA DAY FOR STATE TITLE GOLF PLAY

In order to avoid congestion and also to augment the fields of the State open and amateur championships, the Massachusetts Golf Association voted to extend each event one day.

In the past, the state open has been a two-day affair. The field, which usually numbers 128 contestants, played two rounds each day. The amateur entries were restricted to a low handicap man but under arrangements, the gates will be somewhat lowered for the "ninety men," and it will not be necessary to limit the field.

The state open will be played on June 3 to June 5 inclusive. The field will play 18 holes each day and at the end of the second day, the low 64 scorers will be eligible for the 36 hole finals.

In the Massachusetts amateur championship, the qualifying rounds will extend over two days instead of one day. The new system is a big test and will also open up the championship to eight handicap men. In the past, the limit was supposed to have been seven, but our players were reduced so as to make them eligible for the class.

Boston Boys Foes in 112-Lb. Class

Two Greater Boston boys, Joseph Geno and Joseph Ricci, battled it out in the 112-pound class for the junior title. Ricci won the contest after three rounds of battling. This made the fourth time that Ricci has beaten Geno in as many contests.

Flavio DeBonis of Fitchburg came through in the 118-pound class to win the junior title after three rounds of battling at fairly even terms with Joseph Pacino of Boston. Ferrante is Massachusetts State champion.

The six contestants in the first three classes, 112, 118 and 126-pound divisions, all came from Massachusetts.

Delmont Wins Another Title for Boston

Dick Madden of Dorchester added another knockout to his long list when he flattened Sandy Orlando of New York in the second round of their bout. Prior to the knockout, the contest was fairly even.

Henry Surrette of Leominster made short work of George Hawkins of Uniontown, Pa., in the final bout of the evening in the heavyweight class.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

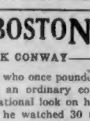
Jim Toland, who once pounded the bricks as an ordinary cop, had an international look on his noble face as he watched 30 to 40 boxers do their daily dozen at his gymnasium on Friend st. in the dear old North End.

"I understand that your gym has assumed an international atmosphere," chirped Mr. Boston.

"Yeah!" replied Jim. "All nationalities are welcome."

"I've idded they pay the usual locker fee," interrupted Mr. Boston.

"Money is necessary to operate a gym," went on Toland. "I like the good kids of the boys, but I must have their money, too, if I am to satisfy the demands of the landlord and other people with whom I do business."



Mr. Boston

"I see," resumed Mr. Boston, "that the International Madison Square Garden, the brain child of the powers that control Madison Square Garden of New York, has come to Tolands to get the boxers for the opening show."

"We have the goods here," persisted Jim.

"There are the two Lopez twins of Watertown, or should I say Spain so as not to offend the sentiments of the International Madison Square Garden Corporation?" declared Mr. Boston. "Then there is Johnny Hanlon of Lynn, I beg your pardon, Jim, I mean Ireland. I believe he is the same young man I saw Jake Zeramby slap around on two occasions at Salem. There is also Frank Herlihy of Lynn. How stupid of me, Jim. I should have said Ireland. And Joe Dos of Armenia. Can it be that Joe Don is my old friend Joe Dow of Lawrence?"

"I hear that Tony Shucco of the North End will also be signed to appear at one of the International Madison Square Garden's shows. Sure, it will be Tony Shucco of Italy.

Leon See Matchmaker for New Club

"I understand that Leon See, manager of Primo Carnera, Al Singer and other sturdy sons of sweat, is matchmaker of the new organization which is sort of a younger brother to Madison Square Garden Corporation, sometimes referred to as the House that Tex Built.

"The International Madison Square Garden Corporation will try to develop new talent. Scouts will go to the ends of the earth, the world, as it were and seek boys who can box.

"Already the scouts have found that trip to Toland's Gym in Boston is much more economical than one which would require search for talent in various parts of Europe.

N. Y. BOARD TO REINSTATE CARNERA

New York, April 8 (US)—The last obstacle in the path of a 15-round match between Jack Sharkey, leading American heavyweight, and Primo Carnera, 265-pound Italian, was surmounted by Promoter James J. Johnston. The match is planned for June 10 at Ebbets Field.

James A. Farley, chairman and spokesman for the State athletic commission, officially confirmed the report that the commission is prepared to reinstate Carnera, who has been ineligible in this State since last June.

Retirement of Charlie Truong of San Francisco as a member of the California boxing commission has left the New York commission free to handle the Carnera case to suit itself, Farley said.

Carnera was suspended as the result of a dubious match with Leon Chevalier at Oakland, Cal., last June, but Farley explained that the New York commission had a working agreement with Truong, and not with the California commission. Farley went on:

"The New York commission will reinstate Carnera sooner or later (when we see fit).

"We will have no objection if he is matched with Sharkey, and neither would anyone else, I imagine. We regarded Sharkey as the best heavyweight in the world. If Carnera is willing to prove his good faith by meeting Sharkey, he will have no trouble about his reinstatement."

Bout to Be Recognized a Title Battle

Farley indicated that the bout would be recognized as a world's championship match, and he also mentioned a plan that will forestall any legal action by Madison Square Garden, which holds a contract on Carnera. He said Carnera might be permitted to sign his own contract for the Sharkey match. The contracts held by the Garden were signed by his manager, who will not be recognized by the commission as legally qualified to sign for the boxer.

Commission Threatens to Suspend Garden

Everything seems to have been worked out so carefully, with the obvious hope of hitting back at the Garden for taking the Max Schmeling title match away from New York. Nor is this all. It is understood the commission also plans to suspend the Garden for the outdoor season if the Schmeling-Stribling fight is promoted by any of the Garden subsidiaries.

MYSTERIOUS WAYE

By PERCIVAL CHRISTOPHER WREN

SYNOPSIS: A plot to murder pretty Marjorie Lauderdell is forestalled by John Waye, fellow-patient in Dr. Charters' nursing home. Waye, who has been given an alibi in the "Spider" Schlitz murder, knows of the past crimes of Charters, Dr. MacAdoo, Mr. James and others on the staff. He astounds MacAdoo by revealing his knowledge of a plot against Marjorie, but the doctor is incensed to learn that Charters is to receive £10,000 in the case. When James learns that MacAdoo has thereupon secured Charters' promise of a 50-50 "cut," he accuses Charters of "double-crossing." Charters admits that the girl's aunt had connived with him to obtain through a poison murder an inheritance that would be hers should Marjorie die before her 21st birthday. But he declares that the scheme is off because of Waye's knowledge of it.

CHAPTER 20

Ambitious James

"But," objected Mr. James, "if the girl goes back to Maud Lauderdell that dame'll bump her off all the same, and we lose the rake-off. D'you want this Maud to scoop that half-million dollars?"

"I can't stop her."

"I can though," said Mr. James, with a quiet and sinister determination.

"How?"

"The girl's husband scraps the pool," he said and leered triumphant. "She'll marry me, all right . . . Only too glad to, byand-bye," Mr. James' leer almost shocked Dr. Charters himself.

"Cut is right out," he said and brought his fist down heavily upon the desk.

"Cut it out! Like blazes you wouldn't treat her rough!

"I wouldn't double-cross Maud," continued the Doctor earnestly, "for a million. Maud comes to me, her old friend and partner, with a private schem of her own and offers me a generous rake-off. If you think I'm going to double-cross her or let anybody else double-cross her, you've got another think coming.

"No, Jimmy," the Doctor went on, "there are three little obstacles to your clever scheme . . . in the first place I'm an honest man, and in the second place the girl wouldn't marry you. And in the third place you're married to Janie . . . Just tell Louie your scheme, my son . . ."

Without reply Mr. James departed.

"Oh," he observed to himself. "And the girl won't marry me, won't she? We'll see about that when I put her wise that I'm her only way out."

There is a tide in the affair of crooks that, taken at the right time and in the right way, leads to easy money.

Should he, or should he not, take the matter into his own hands and strike out a line of his own?

Since the Boss was getting chicken-hearted and allowing this Waye guy to pull any bunk he liked, should he, Mr. James, double-cross the Boss? Kill two birds with one stone? Or rather kill the Waye bird—and marry the other bird?

No man had ever yet scored off Mr. James, insulted or manhandled him (as this Waye had done) and lived to brag about it. Suppose he were to bump Waye off, run away with the Lauderdell skirt, "marry" her and settle down on the 100,000 coming to her on her 21st birthday?

Once married to him she'd soon come across with the dough, too, all of it. He had a way with women, all right. Treat 'em rough and treat 'em often.

And the girl would be glad enough to marry him—no somebody else—to get away from The Monastery . . . if she were properly handled . . . Jump at the chance.

What girl in her right senses would refuse an honorable offer of marriage from Mr. James—apart from any question of the alternative—an incurable insaneness? She'd certainly jump at the chance if it were only to shorten her stay in that bedroom by a single month.

Yes—but what would the Boss do?

What could he do? Mr. James knew quite as much about Halfhung Simon as Halfhung Simon knew about Mr. James. Enough to hang him. And with the girl's money safely cached Mr. James would be independent for life.

And the money became the girl's absolutely on September the first, when she was 21. Why let Maud have all that green wad and only peel off 10,000 for those who landed it? . . . Shame to bump off a pretty girl like Marjorie.

Yes—Mr. James would make up to her forthwith, and when she was about at the end of her tether, propose both matrimony and escape.

She'd take the former for the sake of the latter, if for no other reason.

Yes—but what about his own lawful wife, Louie the lady? . . . Well, she'd get what was coming to her if she couldn't listen to reason—and have the common decency to sink down in a decorative until the cash was cached—the jealous cat.

It was evident this bright morning, even to Dr. Studley, Sister Weldon, the other nurses and the patients, that their beloved Matron, kind Nurse Jones, watchful Mr. James, clever Dr. MacAdoo and the irrepressible Dr. Charters himself had something on their minds, were upset about something.

And upon the minds of the five there was something incredible, monstrous, nauseating—the realization of human depravity hitherto mercifully concealed from them.

"It surely is the most plumb wicked thing I ever heard of," said Mr. James, "and, Boss, I don't stand for it. It was bad enough when we thought it was a stranger. How on earth did they come to pick on Chink Dorson?"

"How?" snapped the Doctor. "Because Waye put them on to him. He wrote the anonymous letter to the police, and it gave them something to work on. They arrested Chink, got his record and framed this case on him.

"As soon as anybody is charged for the murder of Schlitz it lets Waye out. He must have known Chink was in England and that his record would go against him . . . and, for all we know, he may have had it in for Chink. He may have thought it clever to put the police on to poor Chink for the murder that he himself had committed . . . Anyway it's unspeakable that he should lie in bed here at eight o'clock in the morning while Chink is walking to the scaffold with the awful ah?-pilot reading the burial service over him while he's alive and aware."

"Look here, Chief," broke in Dr. MacAdoo, "we must save poor old Chink at all costs."

Dr. Charters turned his stern regard first upon the matron and then upon Nurse Jones. Not from them had come the merciful appeal. Sardonically he eyed the ladies, and neither of them spoke.

"At our own risk, Manoel?" he asked. "Send for the police and hand Waye over to them—to tell them all he knows?"

"I'm going to do something, all right," Mr. James assured him. "Your Mr. Unspeakable Skunk is going to get his from me right now."

"Look here," continued the doctor. "You can cut the policeidea and the killing-idea right out, for I won't have the police sent here about a dead Waye any more than a live one. But I'll give him something to think about. Chink's hanged Waye goes or he never goes at all. I'll tell him he'll take the rap of killing him and that we'll tell Sir Bernard Mathieson and his solicitor and banker that he went hopelessly mad and escaped before we could get him certified.

"But—but," said Jimmy, we're not going to do it. A dead Waye is going to be more dangerous to us than a live one. As soon as Chink's hanged Waye goes or he never goes at all. I'll tell him he'll take the rap of killing him and that we'll tell Sir Bernard Mathieson and his solicitor and banker that he went hopelessly mad and escaped before we could get him certified.

"But—but," said Jimmy, we're not going to do it. A dead Waye is going to be more dangerous to us than a live one. As soon as Chink's hanged there's no further reason for Waye to hide here, and there's no earthly reason why he should return our hospitality by rounding on us. And I'm sure you're going to listen to the mad mutterings of the lunatic for whom Dr. Charters is handing away cheques.

"And we can't do anything to help Chink," he added. "We can't lift a finger. It's the worst thing I ever heard of. But there it is, and if the man's got absolutely no conscience at all, poor Chink's got to swing."

And as his colleagues left him alone the Doctor smiled as he added:

"Yes—Chink Dorson's got to swing—and the sooner the better. Thank you, Mr. Waye. . . .

Death or marriage? But Mr. James' proposal to Marjorie tomorrow is embarrassingly interrupted—by his wife!

AT THE LISTENING POST

SEVEN O'CLOCK nightly is a time that nearly all sponsors have evaded on the basis that bucking Amos and Andy would be futile. These two famous characters have practically become Seven O'Clock itself. There is rising and widening comment to the effect that "Lena and Jake" from WTAM, Cleveland, are carrying on in the face of the "bugaboo" most successfully. Many Listening Posters (our gang) actually prefer Lena and Jake, which is a tribute to the ability of the latter. It may be proof that radio listeners are fickle and that fame is fleeting.

WE WOULD HARDLY care to say that Amos and Andy are losing their hold, but Jake and Lena are cutting in—that's a fact. At seven o'clock, too. WEEI has them at eight each morning.

* * *

IN AN ATTEMPT TO combat "microfright" as suffered by radio speakers, NBC has transformed its New York reception rooms into a beautiful English beamed library setting for the exclusive use of prominent artists. This is to rest their nerves, it is said. No such comforting atmosphere is afforded amateurs, however, who have to take their "auditions" by the herd, a la sheep.

* * *

MORNING PROGRAMS, heretofore neglected as to quality, are perking up noticeably. Commercial sponsors have awakened to the realization that before noon is an advantageous time during which to promote ideas with housewives. Afternoon bits are likewise improved, it appears.

SETH PARKER (Phillips Lord) made such a big hit with Boston folks on his firs. personal appearance here, that he is booked back at Symphony Hall with his entire troupe. April 28 is the date set for the newly announced "githerin'."

This b'cast marks the screen star's first appearance since her radio debut a year ago. Although Miss Parsons' interviews are carefully written, from the cheery informality of the chats Hollywood can believe they are ad libitum affairs.

Port of Boston

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Increase in freight from the Gulf ports to the port of Boston has forced the Mooremack Gulf Line to put an extra steamer on the route between Boston and New Orleans.

Heavy cargo movement has pressed the steamer Commercial Bostonian into the trade to bring cotton for New England mills to Boston, and she is scheduled today at Hoosoo Tunnel docks.

DISCUSS QUARANTINE

Discussion of the effect of Senate bill 5743, which authorizes 24-hour quarantine inspection by the U. S. United States ports, on the Port of Boston will be held at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce's Immigration and Quarantine of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, in the Chamber of Commerce building this afternoon.

MONKEYS IN COLLISION

Carrying a cargo of monkeys for the Port of Boston, the British steamer City of Canton, bound here from Colombo, Ceylon, by way of Philadelphia, and the ferryboat City of Chester collided Monday off Thunder Hole, Nantasket Beach, and went on to her anchorage tut the ferryboat sustained damage to her superstructure. Similar cargoes are in the jungles of Africa, were being shipped here to the Benson Animal Farm in Nashua, N. H.

Reserves Against Unemployment

Where Business Management Has Failed

Business management in the large has fallen down in its failure to provide work for loyal and efficient employes.

It is manifestly unfair for the social cost of depression to fall so heavily on the shoulders of those least able to bear it—namely, the unemployed.

Greater social justice in the future need not rest on visionary schemes, but on WIDER ADOPTION OF PRACTICAL PLANS ALREADY SUCCESSFULLY USED BY MORE PROGRESSIVE COMPANIES.

Numerous hopeful experiments have been undertaken either by employers alone or in co-operation with organized labor, to set up reserves to maintain the income of wage earners during periods of depression.

An outstanding example of social-mindedness on the part of big business is the plan of the General Electric Company, under which the corporation matches contributions of workers equal to 1 per cent of their salary. The proceeds are used to take care of laid-off workers at one-half pay for a period of not more than ten weeks a year.

Funds have been set up in New York City by the clothing and fur trades which give relief to the most needy unemployed. A similar fund has been set up in the men's clothing industry at Rochester, N. Y.

Individual corporations, including the American Rolling Mill Company, Associated Oil Company, Dennison Manufacturing Company, Hart, Schaffner & Marx, Nash Company, Kountree Company, Ltd., Tidewater Oil Company, United States Rubber Company and Standard Oil of Ohio, have instituted the so-called "dismissal wage" which, as a lump sum or a series of payments, is designed to take care of workers who are thrown out of employment without responsibility on their own part, until they can get new jobs.

In calling favorable attention to these promising innovations in humane management, the Committee on Stabilization of Industry for the Prevention of Unemployment, in its report to Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, astutely points out: "Such payments are not doles nor are they merely palliatives. In the first place, they extend to labor THE SAME TYPE OF FINANCIAL PROTECTION AGAINST DEPRESSION AND BAD YEARS WHICH MANY WELL-MANAGED COMPANIES CAN NOW GIVE TO THEIR STOCKHOLDERS. Such systems will also help stabilize industry itself."

The public will not perpetually remain tolerant of slovenly employers, whose very inefficiency pauperizes innocent toilers.

BUSINESS DEPENDS ON SOCIAL SANCTIONS, WHICH IT WILL RECEIVE IN THE LONG RUN ONLY IF IT IS INTELLIGENTLY DIRECTED TO THE SERVICE OF MAN.

Public opinion is becoming distrustful of a system which wastefully employs an unnecessarily large number of workers in boom times and which ruthlessly throws the very same workers out into the street in slack periods.

The more progressive employers are wisely concerning themselves with the legitimate desire of workers for security of tenure.

Other companies should be prodded into taking a leaf from the book of experience of innovating employers.

A Well-Named School

A splendid tribute to motherhood, and to one example of perfect motherhood in particular, is given by the school committee in its decision to name the new intermediate school on Pershing Road, Jamaica Plain, Mary Curley school, after the wife of Mayor Curley.

Mrs. Curley's many fine attributes are thereby memorialized in a permanent way, so that generations of parents and children will have her many beautiful qualities constantly before them.

To Dr. Joseph V. Lyons, who suggested the name, and to the other members of the committee, the community is grateful for an apt and appropriate dedication.

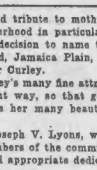
Listen, World! Fear

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Don't Let It Take You for a Ride

"HE WAS taken for a ride—"

You read that pretty often in these racketeering days. Someone is picked bodily out of his or her familiar surroundings, hustled into a car, "taken for a ride"—then abandoned, crippled or killed. Makes you shudder to read about things like that. To think of vicious brutes, swooping down—out of the dark—demoralizing and demolishing someone's life.



Elsie Robinson

"Thank God no one can do that to me!" you say.

And yet, something does do that to you, every little while!

FEAR DOES THAT TO YOU . . .FEAR TAKES YOU FOR A RIDE.

Fear thrusts a "rod" in your ribs—

Fear locks you in a strange black car—

Rushes you away from familiar surroundings—from honest work and happy play, from peace and love and self-respect and all those qualities, seen and unseen, which make a healthy life.

Fear hustles you away from them all—hurls you headlong, into the night, with blood pounding an insane tattoo in your terrified heart.

And, when it is through with you, Fear abandons you—crippled—far from the home of your spirit, to make your way back as best you can.

And it is many an hour, many a day or month that you must spend crawling, before you get back to the place where Fear first seized you. Some never get back.

Fear does that to you. Fear does that to all of us. Fear lurks around the corner, gun in hand—

YET YOU ARE NOT AT THE MERCY OF FEAR—

FEAR CANNOT TAKE YOU FOR A RIDE UNLESS YOU LET IT.

You have greater weapons at your command than the gun of Fear. . .if you will use them.

You have intelligence at your command. . .and courage. . .and laughter. . .and hard work. . .and quiet prayer.

You can fight Fear with all of these things. You can rout Fear—ANY fear—if you will use these things. You cannot save yourself from being hurt during the course of your life. . .BUT YOU CAN SAVE YOURSELF FROM BEING FRIGHTENED.

YOU CAN SAVE YOURELF FROM BEING TAKEN FOR A RIDE.

Think it down! Laugh it down! Work it down! Dash it down!

Thrust the rod of your own courage in the skinny ribs of Fear—AND FEAR WILL FLOP!

EDUCATION OF YOUNG AMERICA FOR PEACE
EDUCATION FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE
"A COMPLETE AND GENEROUS EDUCATION" John Milton
Gopin

Military colleges and schools of the United States are performing a great and needed service for the country and should be given encouragement.

Education for the national defense, as well as for individual advantage in the battle of life, is the best way of squeezing out the slacker complex.

Our educational system is generous, but, except in those schools which include military science and tactics, it is not complete.

We need more military schools and more of such courses in other schools.

Marvellous, especially, is the Penetrometer, man's latest contribution to "see the insides first."

"The heart knoweth his own bitterness," says the Bible.

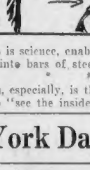
If Uncle Sam knew the bitterness in some of those foreign hearts, how they HATE him, how they ENVY him, he would put padlocks on all his pockets, and cotton in his ears at the sight of any foreign statesman saying: "Sam, I love you."

New York Day by Day

Time and Telephone

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 8—The telephone company is arranging to have all its time-of-day queries broadcast by one person from a glass booth. This caller will merely announce the precise time every ten seconds. Those who call in for the exact o'clock will not have to wait any longer than that at most.



Correct time appears to mean more to hurrying New Yorkers than people anywhere in the world. It is estimated that 300,000 persons daily either ask their own switchboard operators or those attached to the telephone company for the time of day or night.

Most of the newer hotels and many modern office buildings have an electrical clock in each room and in elevators. In one square on Broadway there are nine curb clocks. In Times Sq. are 18 horological devices. Fifth ave. averages a sidewalk clock to every three blocks.

In mid-town one may look out almost any window and see a clock. There are in the greater city 112 large electrically lighted clocks. Electric beacons flash quarter hours from several towers. And the largest clock in the world is on the Jersey Side of the Hudson River.

Big jewelry establishments say they will average 50 people a day who drop in to find out the exact time. Of course, the large number of commuters who arrive and depart daily for their suburban homes play a big part in this clock consciousness.

The telephone company has for years maintained a Time Service Departments. By dropping a nickle in the slot and asking for Meridian 7-1212 one may learn not only the exact hour but the exact minute. The average number of calls here is about 50,000.

In this department are 20 operators by day and four after 2 a. m. Oddly enough gamblers are the most insistent in demands for the exact hour. Around 7 in the evening women lead in inquiring the time. It is the hour when husbands begin showing up late for dinner.

New York telephones, incidentally, will be completely dialed in seven years. Thus will a public lose contact with about the cheeriest of all employes—the telephone operators. There may be grouchy ones but I have yet to run across one. And while it has nothing to do with telephone service I just happened to think anyone wanting ry cement stock is welcome.

Charles Hanson Towne is not a believer in the occult. Yet in his recent book he tells of dropping in at a vaudeville theater on a sweltering evening years ago. He was worried about the illness of a friend. No sooner had he taken his seat than a blindfolded lady on the stage suddenly announced:

"Tell the gentleman in the Palm Beach suit his friend will not recover. His name is Hale."

Two days later Towne's friend Walter Hale, about whom he had been worrying, passed away. Towne was wearing a Palm Beach suit.

And that's why he still looks startled.

And then there was Arthur Moss, once editor of the Greenwich Village Quill, who was told by a crystal gazer that within a month he would take a train trip and be away two months. In ten days he sailed for Europe and has been gone nine years.

"The crystal was a bit foggy that day," explains Moss.

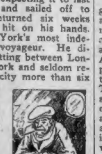
Gilbert Miller staged a fragile, artistic little play called "Tomorrow and Tomorrow" expecting it to last a week or so and sailed off to Europe. He returned six weeks later to find a hit on his hands. Miller is New York's most indefatigable ocean voyageur. He divides his time flitting between London and New York and seldom remains in either city more than six weeks. In 16 Atlantic crossings I have run into him aboard nine different ships. For awhile I thought he was a transAtlantic house detective.



For no reason whatever, save to putter, I reached around just now and twisted a little gadget I had never seen before in the back of my typewriter. And the letter that should come next to t, in typewriter won't budge. So I have to use the letter u. I'll keep skidding around until I get the letter I out of whack. And that will be mu finish.

The Marry-Go-Round - By Helen Rowland

Lovers—and Others

THE FACT that a man enjoys kissing a woman never appears to be a proof that he is not in love with another woman. He may enjoy eating an orange, even though he much prefers a melon.

By the time a woman has succeeded in convincing a man that he was all wrong, she has usually succeeded in convincing him that he no longer lover her.

A man loves the woman who throws him over, far better than the one who hangs onto him, and keeps eternally reminding him of her "sacrifice."

Lucky the woman whose husband never notices her clothes. The average man appears to think that the mere act of marrying a woman endows him with the expert eye of a millinery designer and the critical taste of a fashion artist.

If some man isn't making a woman "suffer," she is usually suffering because she has no man to make her suffer. You can't rob a woman of her divine right to be a "martyr."

* * *

The only way for a girl to be perfectly happy with any man is to let him suspect that she could be passably happy without him.

Becher's Brook

The Most Famous Steeplechase Jump

OVER THEY GO, IN THE GRAND NATIONAL

Millions of Americans have talked about the Grand National Steeplechase. Some, foolishly, have lost money betting on it, buying lottery tickets, in spite of the fact that the laws of the United States forbid lotteries. Having talked about it, you may be interested in this striking picture showing horses going over Becher's Brook, difficult obstacle in the long steeplechase course, which is the most famous on earth.

This jump was named for Captain Becher, who rode in the Grand National when it started many years ago, fell twice at this jump, remounted, and went on.

The power of the horses and the admirable horsemanship of riders shown here are impressive. The horses look as though they were flying. Pegasus, the winged horse, with his feathery supports, was not more graceful. The riders, leaning far back, that they may not be thrown over their horses' heads on landing, show great skill in handling the reins.

You observe no weight put on the horse's mouth, pulling it open and interfering with the animal's jumping.

It is a fine thing to develop a beautiful horse, and man has done his share of the work admirably, in breeding thoroughbreds. Credit, of course, belongs primarily to nature. According to scientists, the modern horse is a product of evolution. Millions of years ago, the only horses on earth were small animals the size of a collie dog, with several toes on each foot, that changed by evolution into one hoof.

Now, the automobile runabout, heavy truck, tractor and flying machine have come. The horse will soon be only a plaything like the greyhound, once important because it could catch deer before men had guns to shoot the deer.

Useful or less useful, men will love and admire the horse.

But they ought to be able to enjoy that noble animal without wasting money and ambition on gambling.

A Notable Gathering

Boston extends a hearty welcome to the delegates and others attending the fiftieth annual convention of the International Association of University Women, being held April 8-11 at Hotel Statler.

This representative body, numbering 33,000 women in 22 different countries, was started fifty years ago in Boston by Mrs. I. Tisdale Talbot, wife of the late Dean Talbot of Boston University School of Medicine, and her daughter, Miss Marion Talbot, now dean of women at the University of Chicago.

Bostonians consequently feel especially proud of the achievements of this influential educational association.

New Life in Losing Job

By WINIFRED BLACK

Beginning of Real Happiness

FRED LOST his job—and now he is glad of it.

And as for little Freddie they can't bear even to hear the word job.

Winifred Black

And as for Dora, we just knew she'd worry herself to death.

Fred's a clever fellow, he's had the same job for seven or eight years now, and it wasn't a bad job at that.

Writing advertising copy—that's what Fred did.

At first he was a great hit.

Not a fortune, to be sure, but a good fat salary, so he married Dora and they lived in a charming apartment and had lots of gay friends and gay parties for other ad-writers and their wives and sweethearts. And they knew actors and newspaper men and playwrights and they all played around together. They drank a good deal and smoked a lot and "fiddled" each other about life, and about death, and about marriage and divorce—and all the things that are so amusing if you want to look at it that way.

Then Fred put every cent he had into some stocks that were going to make him rich, and he and Dora planned a trip around the world.

And whoosh!—away into the thin air went Fred's job.

The firm was reorganizing and Fred was put.

They are raising chickens and ducks and pigeons for the market.

They live in a little old-fashioned farmhouse. They have no car and no radio, no, not even a phonograph—you'd think they'd be bored to death, wouldn't you?

Dora makes their own butter and, she's going to put up their own jelly and preserves. She gets up at dawn and goes to bed at eight o'clock—but you ought to see little Dora and little Freddie—you'd never know them.

They walk a mile and a half to the village school every day and don't think a thing of it. They made snow men this Winter and hung on the back of sleds and went sliding on the pond—and they can't bear to hear anyone speak of the city or of Fred's old job.

Fred says the best thing that ever happened to him happened the day he lost his job.

Queer people Fred and Dora—aren't they?
